Tell All, Firm Urges City

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

The management consultant hired by Victoria to review operations in city hall's personnel department says he wants no part of a cover-up and has urged council to release the full details of his investigation.

In a letter to Mayor Mike Young and council, Gordon Newhouse, of G.H. Newhouse and Associates Ltd., states: "In the absence of all the facts not being made known, we suggest that the reputation of our firm has suffered irreparable harm. We are not prepared to continue to let this happen.

"We also wish it to be made known that our firm will not be party to or condone the covering up of any issues or actions either by council or by executive administration. In this regard, we believe that in the final analysis, our ultimate professional responsibility must be to the citizens of the city of Victoria . . . we respectfully request that council in the interests of responsible government, make known or confirm the full nature of our findings."

The letter also charges that Ald. Larry Ryan subjected the firm to falsehoods and possible slander at a recent council meeting.

Two weeks ago Ryan attacked Newhouse and Associates, saying the consultant had been responsible for the demolition of the personnel department.

Because of a report from Newhouse city council fired personnel director Terry FitzPatrick.

FitzPatrick, who at 60 had reached retirement age but had an option for five more years service, was dismissed after he refused to resign.

No reasons were ever given for the firing, but it was learned that shortly before his dismissal, FitzPatrick had been ordered by the mayor to stop allowing the company that publishes B.C.

CBC Union Grievance On Nash Appointment

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees has filed a grievance with CBC television in an attempt to have Knowlton Nash removed from his position as anchorman of the network's 11 p.m. newscast, a union spokesman said Wednesday.

Barrie Davis, chief negotiator for the broadcast division of the union, said the grievance, filed Nov. 2, is based on CBC's failure to audition and assign the position to a staff announcer.

Davis said the appointment of Nash is a violation of the collective agreement because management has rewritten the role of a newscaster, whose duties under the agreement consist only of reading the news.

"Newscasters have never done journalistic work, but Nash will be. He created a job for himself and the management took the jurisdiction to label Nash chief correspondent, when there is no such animal in our collective agreement."

Dennis O'Neill, executive assistant to the managing director of CBC television programming, said that although as many as 100 staff members were interested in the job, "management considered Nash as good or better than any others on staff."

The position as anchorman for week-night newscasts came open when Peter Kent was appointed CBC's Africa correspondent.

Snag Could Halt Peace Talks: Sadat

Times News Services

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says peace talks with Israel may be suspended and the Jewish state today acknowledged negotiations have run into difficulties that could cut short Prime Minister Menachem Begin's trip to Canada and bring him home.

Israeli Foreign Ministry officials said they did not know the nature of the problems but cited news reports from Washington. The reports said the talks have bogged down over the issue of linking the treaty to the future of other occupied Arab territories.

Reports from Montreal that Begin may cut short a six-day official trip to Canada could not be confirmed.

Sadat spoke of a possible suspension in the negotiations Wednesday in an interview with the Kuwaiti newspaper Al Siyassah. "There is a possibility of a break in the negotiations. But I am confident that if this happens the Israelis will come back within one month to resume the dialogue."

Sadat also said Carter supports his demand for a withdrawal from the Golan Heights — a remark observers said was sure to anger the Israelis.

Israeli reports said Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defence Minister Ezer Weizman may return home from Washington again for a special cabinet session to be called by Begin next week.

The officials said it appears from news reports that the Egyptians want to reopen some points agreed on during the earlier stages of the negotiations.

Israeli construction of a 1,500-apartment complex on the West Bank were linked in some reports to Sadat's statement. Sadat also accused oil-rich Arab states of pettiness and defeatist attitudes for failing to endorse his peacemaking efforts with Israel.

In Montreal Wednesday night, Begin had urged sympathizers to be patient in the quest for a peace treaty with Egypt and to give generously to bolster his country's economic future.

A Life Saving Nuisance

WINFIELD (CP) — Dwain Johanson's dog is named Nuisance but its barking that woke the household early Wednesday was an annoyance that saved the lives of two young canoeists.

Nuisance, a German Shepard guard dog, was barking because it heard two young men in the middle of Kalamalka Lake calling for help after their canoe capsized.

Richard Russell, 18, and Dean Holman, 17, both of Winfield, were pulled from the freezing and choppy waters of the lake in the Okanagan Valley by Johanson, 46, who was awakended by his dog, heard cries for help and reached the men in his small boat at about 3:30 a.m. PST.

"After five or 10 minutes, I finally located the boys hanging on to the overturned canoe," he said. "They looked like they had just about had the biscuit.

"What they were doing out there at that time of night in those waters I can't imagine," said Johanson.

The men were treated at hospital and released.

Banky-Panky Probe

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government is investigating the possibility that the country's chartered banks have been instrumental in the recent decline of the dollar by speculating against Canadian currency, Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Wednesday.

Chretien quickly added, however, there are no grounds at this time for such accusations.

The minister was replying in the Commons to questions from Social Credit MP Eudore Allard (Rimouski).

Chretien later told reporters he chose the date for next week's budget against the advice of at least one provincial premier who had asked for a delay of two weeks.

He did not name the premier.

Chretien said he refused the postponement because he had already committed himself to a mid-November budget and saw little point in awaiting the outcome of a first ministers' meeting later in the month.

Perhaps in anticipation of budget contents, the U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds at noon today was down 6-25 at $1.1723 in Montreal trading.

The U.S. dollar came under heavy selling pressure in Tokyo today and started with losses in Europe, stalling for a second straight day President Carter's currency rescue hopes.

Royal Trust Plans Quebec Escape

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Trust Co., Canada's largest trust company, is putting the final touches on moving its head office to Ottawa from Montreal by reorganizing its shares into an Ottawa-based holding company called Royal Trustco Ltd.

Royal Trust's 7,800 shareholders received a letter this week informing them they have until Dec. 1 to exchange their stock for shares in the new company.

The move is the final step in a three-year operation by Royal Trust to become a federally-chartered corporation.

Shareholders will have no power to approve or disapprove the head-office relocation, because the company is changing name, thus avoiding an emotion-charged debate such as the one precipitated by the head office move by Sun Life to Toronto.

But they can choose whether to exchange their stock in the Quebec-based operating company for stock in the Ottawa holding company.

In the letter explaining the reorganization, Royal Trust says it wants to free itself from the straitjacket of provincial legislation governing the growth, money-raising and operations of a trust company.

It wants corporate freedom to diversify through acquisitions outside the trust business — something that Quebec regulatory bodies now deny a trust company.

"It gives us more flexibility for that," Richard La Prairie, Royal Trust's executive vice-president and chief financial officer, said.

Royal Trust administers assets worth $19.2 billion, its latest audited report shows. Quebec accounts for 24 per cent of its gross income, which was $595 million last year.

Under the share exchange proposal, shareholders will receive four shares of Royal Trustco stock for each three Royal Trust Co. shares they submit.

Two other trust companies — Canada Trust Co. and Canada Permanent Trust Co, —became corporations to escape provincial restrictions on their operations.

South Africa, Angola Square Off On Border

Times News Services

UNITED NATIONS — In a military move that could undermine Western diplomatic efforts to avoid immedate confrontation with African countries at the Security Council, South Africa has begun a major build-up of troops in the northern part of Namibia, according to Western intelligence reports.

The South African move, which reportedly involves two new regiment-sized units, is being matched on the other side of the Angola-Namibia frontier by a general mobilization of Angola's army and militia and reinforcement of Cuban troops in that area, according to other diplomatic sources.

Angola, meanwhile, clamped a dusk-to-dawn curfew today on guerrilla territory along the strategic 1,000 mile Benguela railway that the Marxist regime promised to reopen within days.

A monitored Radio Luanda broadcast said the curfew was being enforced in Mocambedes, Benguela, Huambo and Bie — the four provinces that straddle the rail line between the Atlantic coast and the Zaire border.

Involved Western diplomats expressed sharp concern about the impact the mutual escalation could have on their continuing efforts here to negotiate a compromise resolution to replace African demands for global economic sanctions against Pretoria in the dispute over Namibia, a mandated territory ruled by South Africa since 1920.

Diplomatic sources said that troop increases could also be aimed at reinforcing the impression that the South Africans and their electoral allies in the territory, the Turnhalle Democratic Alliance, will continue to control the territory in the future.

Angola's ambassador to Belgium, Luis de Almeida, told a news conference in Brussels that Angolan President Agostinho Neto has mobilized a 200,000-strong militia force as well as the country's 31,000-man standing army because it fears that the build-up in the four provinces is a prelude to a South African attack into Angola to hit at SWAPO, a patriotic Namibian organization which is based in that country.

Negotiations at the United Nations continued Wednesday as the African countries — who have shown no enthusiasm for putting the United States and its allies in the difficult position of having to choose between joining or vetoing the sanctions — once again backed away from a showdown.

In a related development, three Canadian cabinet ministers confirmed Wednesday the RCMP has been investigating allegations that 155mm. shells were shipped from Canada to Spain and then on to Durban, South Africa, in defiance of United Nations sanctions.

Premium Revenues Up Sharply For ICBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corp. of British Columbia has reported net premiums for its automobile insurance act fund of $171,932,000 for the six months ended Aug. 31, compared with premiums of $145,414,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Total revenue was $194,999,000 compared with $165,690,000 in 1977.

President Robbie Sherrell said in a news release today that although the number of claims recorded is almost nine per cent higher than the corresponding period last year, the average dollar cost has stabilized.

"We have expectations that as a result of control programs, this levelling-off will be maintained for the balance of the year," he said.

Bodily injury claims averaged $4,750 during the period under review, $940 or 16.5 per cent less than the $5,690 average in 1977.

Sherrell said that although the figures are encouraging, it was still too early to made a definite prediction on rates next year.

RATE JUMP

LONDON (CP) — Britain's bank rate was pushed up by a huge 2.5 percentage points today in what appeared to be a government warning of economic restraint if unions defy wage guidelines.

The Bank of England announced that the rate has been increased to 12.5 per cent from 10.

SECOND JUDGE INVESTIGATED

A second B.C. judge is being investigated as to his relationship with a prostitute.

Justice Minister Otto Lang has asked the Judicial Council of Canada to investigate the activities of the federally-apointed judge, who sits in high court in B.C.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said in Vancouver on Wednesday only that the matter had been referred to the council following an initiative by Lang.

Other sources indicated, however, that the judge was involved with a prostitute working for an expensive call girl ring in downtown Vancouver.

Vancouver morality officers working to crack the ring apparently wanted to call the judge as a witness in court proceedings.

The case is the second in recent days involving a judge.

Gardom earlier revealed that the B.C. Judicial Council had been asked to conduct an inquiry into charges that a provincial court judge in Vancouver consorted with a known prostitute.

Shipyard Strike Vote

About 800 shipyard workers in Victoria and Vancouver were taking a strike vote today to back demands for a new contract.

The employees, who work at Yarrows in Esquimalt and Burrard Dry Dock in North Vancouver, belong to 23 unions and are represented at the bargaining table by the Joint Shipyard Conference.

Although a strike vote is being taken, a walkout is not imminent as mediator Ken Albertini is still involved and has scheduled meetings for Nov. 27 and 28.

Double Debut

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Lucille Folland made a double debut Wednesday — as a grandmother and a midwife.

And from early indications, she's a star at both.

The impromptu performance began when her daughter-in-law, Rhonda Hinde, felt labor pains but got no closer to the hospital than the living room of the family's mobile home at nearby Heffley Creek.

By the time the ambulance arrived, Mrs. Folland had safely delivered Robert James Hinde, Jr., her first grandchild.

Her only anxious moments, she said, came when the baby was born with the umbilical cord wound around its neck.

It is common for a baby to be born with the cord around its neck, said Dr. James Downie, chief of obstetrics and gynecology at Royal Inland Hospital here. Problems arise only when the cord is stretched tight and cuts off the oxygen to the baby.

Mrs. Folland said the cord was cut with scissors disinfected with Southern Comfort liquor and tied with macrame thread. The baby and mother arrived at hospital an hour later and both were doing fine.

Ships Collide on Mississippi

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Two cargo ships loaded with scrap collided in the Mississippi River at New Orleans today, spilling heavy oil into the water, the U.S. Coast Guard said.

No injuries were reported.

The size of the spill led to initial reports that one of the ships was a tanker, but the vessels later were identified as the Irene Lemos and the Maritime Justice, both bulk carriers.

The Irene Lemos, of Liberian registry, went down at the bow, apparently taking on water through a gash in the hull. The Maritime Justice, of Panamanian registry, ran aground near the bank and was in no other apparent trouble.

Fisherman Killed In Fire

A fisherman died about 11 p.m. Wednesday when a 34-foot fishing vessel hit a rock near Port Hardy and caught fire.

No names have been released but a Pacific Rescue Centre spokesman said two men jumped overboard and only one made it to shore.

The RCMP later found a body.

In other mishaps, Bill Hadath of Kamloops was rescued unharmed on Wednesday after his Cessna 207 crashed in the Ashcroft area on a flight from Kamloops to Campbell River.

The rescue spokesman said location of the crash was pinpointed up by a Buffalo aircraft from Comox through an electronic locater transmitter on the Cessna.

The centre chartered a helicopter from Okanagan Helicopters and Hadath was flown back to Kamloops.

Two unidentified people escaped unharmed when their 14-foot pleasure craft was holed when it hit a deadhead near Valdez Island about 3 p.m. on Wednesday.

The Canadian Coast Guard hovercraft was despatched from Vancover, and the craft was found beached and the people safe.

The 45-foot sailing vessel Bravalachi with one person aboard reported taking on water about 9:30 p.m Wednesday near Cape Lazo in the Comox area. A pump was put aboard and an auxiliary vessel from HMCS Quadra on Goose Spit near Comox towed the craft back.

Public Hearing On Housing

A public hearing on a proposed James Bay housing project goes ahead tonight at city hall despite threats of legal action by a community group and a mix-up over the development plans.

Charles Ball, information officer for the James Bay Residents' League, said the group has informed city council it will take the city to court if the hearing on the Daon Development Corporation's proposal proceeds.

The company wants to build 23 housing units on property at Boyd and Luxton, using the zero lot line design principle.

Council had earlier rejected the application but then decided to call a second hearing, following complaints about high unemployment levels in the local building trades.

The JBRL claims council has no right to hold a public hearing on the matter until a hearing on broad zoning issues is held Nolv. 23.

Both the JBRL and the James Bay Community Association oppose the Daon development proposal, claiming the density is too high.

The company responded by agreeing to extend the original 1.5-acre site area, so that the density would be reduced.

But plans recently displayed at city hall apparently didn't show the revised lot size and there is some doubt as to the validity of tonight's hearing.

Express Ads Explained

Competition between the federal and provincial governments for lottery dollars was to blame for saturation Western Express ads on a television movie, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said today.

Sunday viewers of the Paul Newman-Robert Redford movie The Sting were driven to distraction by Express ads that ran over and over again during the three-hour movie.

McCarthy said today the Express spends less on advertising than the federal government's Loto Canada but said she, too, objected to the bunching of the ads during the movie.

The advertising agency that arranged the time for the Express during the movie told the minister it had to buy the entire package so there was no choice as to the number of slots used.

But McCarthy said if that was the case, it should not have agreed to the deal and she hopes it doesn't happen again.

He Captured America. . .

Times News Services

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. — Norman Rockwell, whose freckled-faced boys, pig-tailed girls, kindly doctors and small town scenes mirrored Americana on Saturday Evening Post covers and Boy Scout calendars in a career spanning six decades, died Wednesday night. He was 84.

On his easel at the time of his death was his last painting — an unfinished depiction of this Berkshire Hills village.

His wife, Molly, said her husband had been ill a long time.

"He died of nothing except being 84," she said.

Rockwell's United States was a nation of rough-hewn but gentle working men, prim grandmothers and soldiers home from the great war.

Critics found his work simplistic, corny and superficially photographic.

If he was sometimes dismissed as a panderer to sentiment — one critic called him the "Lawrence Welk of painting" — he was also praised as "America's Rembrandt" and its favorite painter.

His gaunt figure, wavy hair and ever-present pipe were as much his trademark as the signature that appeared on hundreds of his works.

He consistently referred to himself as an "illustrator" or "a storyteller" but not an artist, although an original Rockwell fetched $27,000 and he was once asked to make an even trade of one of his own paintings for an original Andrew Wyeth valued at $50,000.

"If you can tell a story in a picture and if a reasonable number of people like your work, it is art," he said.

At 76, Rockwell told an interviewer his work was always improving:

"Someone once asked Picasso his favorite of all the pictures he ever painted and he replied, 'The next one.'

"I'll echo the master."

He sold his first painting to the Post at the age of 22 for $50. It showed a young boy reluctantly pushing a baby carriage and marked the beginning of an era.

Over the decades, he turned out throat-catching, eye-wetting scenes that caught Americans being American — a doctor patiently examining a little girl's doll, a bare-bottomed boy ready to receive a shot, a family solemnly giving thanks before dinner, Rosie the Riveter doing her part for the war effort, an army veteran's homecoming.

"I didn't set out on purpose to paint a sunny America," he said. But gentle humor and charm characterized the Rockwell style until the troubled and divisive 1960s drove him to comment with his paintbrush.

"For 47 years, I portrayed the best of all possible worlds — grandfathers, puppy dogs — things like that. That kind of stuff is dead now," he said at age 75. "And I think it's about time."

In place of Little Leaguers and sore-pawed puppies appeared a portrait of three slain Southern civil rights workers an a wide-eyed pigtailed black girl on her way to a segregated school, flanked by four U.S. marshals.

Battles Flare In Beirut Streets

BEIRUT (UPI) — Shootouts disrupted traffic Wednesday along the no-man's land that cut Beirut in half in the 1975-76 civil war. The cabinet met to discuss an outbreak of snipings and bombings.

Scattered sniper fire and a 15-minute machinegun battle stopped morning traffic briefly at some of the main crossings between the city's Moslem West and Christian East.

Sources said the fighting made driving in parts of the so-called "green line" dividing the two sectors hazardous, but there were no immediate reports of casualties.

Gunfire also broke out in the southeast suburb of Ain Rummaneh, but residents said the clashes were just "part of our daily routine."

Shah's Net Scoops Ex-Prime Minister

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Former prime minister Amir Abba Hoveida, for more than a decade one of the shah's closest associates, was arrested Wednesday as Iran's new military government continued its crackdown against prominent political figures reputedly involved in widespread corruption.

Officials here said a total of 153 former key officials are either under arrest or have been charged in warrants that have not yet been served.

Underscoring his determination to stamp out alleged corruption, the shah Wedneday met with Justice Minister Hossein Najafi and instructed him to set up special tribunals to prosecute those arrested.

Najafi has been retained from the dissolved civilian cabinet of former prime minister Jaafar Sharif-Emami, who replaced Hoveida in September. Najafi's retention in the government was viewed by political observers as a significant step.

The shah also called for an investigation into the holdings of the imperial family in another bid to halt anti-government violence.

In an order broadcast on Iranian television, the shah also reiterated a pledge to complete investigations into the assets and business partnerships of more than 50 of his relatives, many of whom now live abroad.

The shah earlier banned royal family members from taking up official positions or business partnerships.

But in Paris, the exiled leader of the shah's Moslem opposition, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, said the "end is near" for the shah and not even superpower intervention can save him.

Khomeini told reporters at his small villa at Pontchartrain, 20 miles west of Paris, "The Russian government is like the other big powers. They have interests in Iran and thus are supporting the shah.

"But none of them can save the shah. His end is near."

The Imperial palace, meanwhile, denied rumors circulating in stock exchanges in the United States that an assassin failed in an attempt to shoot the shah. Nonetheless troops and tanks of the military government of Gen. Gholam Reza Azhari, Iran's chief of staff who replaced Sharif-Emami on Sunday, remained on alert.

A crippling strike by 37,000 oil-refinery employees, which began more than a week ago, continued to cost Iran about $60 million a day in lost oil exports.

Winnie Grandson Gets Sack

Churchill, 38, joined a rebellion by right-wing Conservatives who defied their party's order to abstain from a parliamentary vote over the renewal of sanctions.

Instead, he and 120 members voted against the renewal order. Minutes later Conservative Leader Margaret Thatcher dismissed him as party spokesman on defence.

Another member of Mrs. Thatcher's front-bench parliamentary team, Northern Ireland spokesman John Biggs-Davison, resigned rather than support her Rhodesia policy.

Despite the rebellion the House of Commons, voted by 320 to 121 to continue sanctions against Rhodesia for another year. It followed a passionate two-day debate on the one-time British colony.

Julian Amery, the Conservative back bencher who master-minded the anti-sanctions rebellion against Mrs. Thatcher, said he was shocked by Churchill's dismissal.

"You cannot sack a Churchill on a patriotic issue," he said.

The unrest in Conservative ranks added to Mrs. Thathcer's problems. Her economic policy is being questioned by former Conservative prime minister Edward Heath and her personal standing in opinion polls is low.

The midnight rebellion came as she mustered support in an effort to defeat the Labor government and force an early general election.

Another Case of the Absurd

Is there no limit to the number of bizarre and absurd situations in which Saanich municipal council can entangle itself?

In past months we have had the ongoing game-show of "Let's Find A Site" (for an industrial park), the final winner of which is supposedly to be determined by referendum next week. (In fact, it appears ever more likely that the referendum is going to cloud the issue further rather than clarify it.)

We have had the grand spectacle of the Minnie Mountain public hearing followed by the charges that the final vote was not legally valid anyway because one of the aldermen works for a company which works for a law firm which is also the law firm for a company that is associated with the company that is trying to build Minnie Mountain. Or something like that. That one, it appears, will eventually be settled in the courts of the land.

And now, to top it all off, we have The Case of the Alderman's Sons and the Drainage Ditch. It appears quite clear that the sons of Ald. Geoff Vantreight went ahead and built drainage ditches and a concrete basin on a piece of municipal land next to their own property, knowing full well they did not have municipal permission to do so.

The excuses that have been given for this infraction of municipal bylaws do not, if one will pardon the pun, hold water.

It was first suggested by Ian Vantreight that he and his brother assumed municipal permission would be forthcoming for the construction because the drainage work is necessary to make the land suitable for farming and the municipality has agreed the land should be used for farming.

Such naivete in these cynical days is touching. Clearly none of the Vantreights has ever been either a developer or a member of a neighborhood group. If they had, they would know that it is never safe to assume what a municipal council will do on any given issue, no matter how simple it may appear on the surface.

Even more illogically, the Vantreights suggested it was necessary to begin the work immediately, rather than wait for municipal approval, so it could be completed in time to be of use for next year's growing season. That may be so, but if this logic was accepted, it would leave the door wide open for the wholesale breaking of municipal bylaws.

For example, every developer could begin construction without having received his rezoning on the grounds that he needed the building finished so he could begin making money from it sooner. It would make a mockery of every municipal bylaw on the books.

Mayor Mel Couvelier has said the issue is a difficult one to deal with because Ald. Vantreight is involved in it. But although council members may find it unpleasant to tackle the matter because it involves the Vantreight name, this should make not one whit of difference to the final decision that council takes.

The Vantreights should not be treated more harshly than any other Saanich residents who have broken municipal bylaws because of fears that council will be accused of giving an alderman's family special treatment. But neither should they be allowed off scot-free if final reports do confirm that bylaws have been broken.

Ald. Vantreight should absent himself from all discussions on the issue (as he has done) and council should endeavor to deal with it on its merits as it would any other case of bylaw-breaking.

Yes, It Is Censorship

Ontario Education Minister Bette Stephenson is, she says, aware that some people will consider her decision to ban a controversial television film from her province's schools "a form of censorship."

She is quite right. Her decision is a form of censorship, and not a particularly subtle one at that. Moreover, the reasons she has given for the decision do not appear to stand up under close examination.

First, Stephenson said a decision to ban the film in schools fell into the same category as the education ministry issuing a list of recommended texts for schools to follow.

This is surely arrant nonsense. The issuing of a list of recommended texts is not a ban on teachers using other books to augment and supplement their course material. It is a beginning from which the teacher can work, not an edict limiting the teacher's choices.

Second, Stephenson said she was concerned that the film involved, The Jesus Trial, contained some historical inaccuracies and was questioning some of the opinions and conclusions it presented to viewers.

There is no doubt the five-hour film is a highly controversial one, taking, as it does, an unusual historical view of the death of Jesus and the role of the Jews in that death. It may even be that Stephenson is quite correct, that the historical view taken is erroneous and that therefore the film's conclusions are also erroneous.

But that is certainly no reason to ban it from the schools. Indeed it might make it an excellent opportunity for the sensitive teacher to discuss with his students the various interpretations that may be made of historical events, the effects those interpretations can have on modern attitudes, and thus the need for careful discrimination in reading or viewing history.

It is surely far better for students to learn those kinds of lessons in school, under the guidance of trained teachers, than for them to be thrust out into the world to read articles or see films like The Jesus Trial on their own with no background in analyzing such presentations.

Stephenson is denying Ontario students that opportunity for no apparent justifiable reason.

"... it doesn't mean they consider you any bigger ... it only means I am considered a tiny bit smaller ..."

JAMES RESTON

An Ironic But Fitting Award

WASHINGTON — The Nobel peace prize was given to President Sadat of Egypt and Prime Minister Begin of Israel precisely on the day when they were fussing with one another over the terms of peace in the Middle East. But maybe the Nobel committee had a good new idea.

Namely, that this honorable award should be made to people, not only for what they had done for peace in the past, but what they might do for it in the future. The timing of the award was not awkward but brilliant. For it reminded both Sadat and Begin that they were engaged together in an historic moment of reconciliation that should not be lost in disputes over less important details.

Two Old Battlers

How, for example, would they deal with the invitation to go to Stockholm Dec. 10 to receive the Nobel peace prize? Could they explain to the world, or even to their own people, that, after 30 years of contention and war, they couldn't settle their major differences because they couldn't agree about a few Israeli "settlements" on the West Bank of the Jordan River?

President Jimmy Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance have been pleading with Sadat and Begin to concentrate on the possibilities of peace rather than on the difficulties of the moment, and to look to the end of the century. But the Nobel committee has brought the question down to hard tacks for both Sadat and Begin, and is forcing them to decide whether they will concentrate on the larger historic questions of peace in the Middle East, with all the risks involved, or concentrate on the politics of the Knesset in Jerusalem and on the divided Arab nations.

It may be ironic that these two old battlers, who have been involved most of their lives in violence, conflict, terror and war, should be proclaimed in their declining years by the Nobel committee as the apostles of peace.

And yet, there is a certain symmetry and logic to this award. After all, Alfred Bernhard Nobel was a Swedish chemist (1833-96) who invented dynamite and other nuisances. He was educated in St. Petersburg, now Leningrad, and like Robert Oppenheimer and other inventors of the atom bomb, began, as he grew older, to doubt the wisdom of blowing up the world.

So he used the considerable financial proceeds of his explosives to reward the people who were working for peace and for the development of the human family in literature, chemistry, physics, physiology, medicine and economics. His prizes, in short, were a personal compensation for his inventions.

The guess here is that it will be surprising if Begin and Sadat don't follow Nobel's example. Both of them have very hard political problems and are being challenged by their opponents at home and abroad.

In the tactical struggle of the peace process, Begin has to deal with the most contentious and gabbiest parliament in the world, and Sadat has to struggle with a divided Arab world which challenges his philosophy of peace and even threatens his life. But they have some things in common, imponderable things that may be more important in the end than their differences over the power of land, money, and weapons.

They agree on the financial burden of military weapons, on the agony of poverty in Egypt and taxation in Isreal, on the menace of the power and philosophy of the Soviet Union and finally, on the dangers of war if they cannot agree on some reasonable compromise.

Reconciliation

That the Nobel committee awarded its peace prize to these two men, at this critical point in the Middle East negotiations, when they are being trailed and hauled toward conflict by narrow political considerations, was probably a very important decision.

At least, there is a better chance now that Sadat and Begin will be able to agree on some kind of compromise by Nov. 18 — the anniversary of Sadat's mission to the Knesset in Jerusalem — and go on together to receive their Nobel peace prize in Oslo Dec. 10. This could be a celebration of reconciliation as worthy and practical as any since the Nobel family turned from explosives to peace at the beginning of this century.

Minnie Mountain

My decision to support the Broadmead Minnie Mountain proposal was based on these factors:

Saanich is growing and all areas must accept a reasonable share of the population increase. Up to now, Ten Mile Point has not been asked to accept any of this growth. The Minnie Mountain proposal provides for a modest population increase, significantly lower in density than other urban areas have accepted.

No community group can expect to exploit the "democratic process" to obtain or maintain a position of protected privilege. Those who oppose a development density in Minnie Mountain of three units per acre are, in fact, pressing for an advantaged position. All other planned urban areas have much higher densities — some 10 times as great.

I opposed the original proposal because the multiple units were too high and that proposal was rejected. The original proposal was almost universally opposed in the community. It is still claimed by some that council is accepting a high rise, high-density apartment development. The facts are that the multiple units are 45 feet high — about 10 feet higher than the single family height limit, the density is lower than any other planned urban area and there are no apartments.

The proposed development has several significant advantages:

It preserves a large area of public open space. It preserves public access to the whole area including access to the beaches and the viewpoints. It limits the environmental impact since there are less than 100 building sites as opposed to 210 building sites if single family homes are built.

The visual and sociological impact is much less than would result from wall-to-wall single family residences.

We are able to obtain the very real protection that a land use contract provides. The project will be carried out by a known and respected developer. The development is specifically planned and oriented to the over-all topography of Minnie Mountain with virtually no visual impact on existing residences.

Traffic density is significantly less than for single family units of the same number.

Finally, I believe that Minnie Mountain and Ten Mile Point are most desirable places to plan development — no agricultural potential, close to services, excellent views, inside the planned residential areas, and so on. The Broadmead proposal enables this choice area to be enjoyed by a few more people with minimum impact on existing residents. This low density, high value, development protects the local community from other less desirable potential development, and that it deserves your support as well as mine.— Ald. Ian Cass, Saanich Council.

Broadmead proposal to develop Minnie Mountain is core of controversy.

Against Rezoning

In response to your editorial of Oct. 26 (Neighborhood Power), the development on Minnie Mountain was strongly opposed because of the introduction of townhouses and condominiums by the developer. This area is zoned for single family dwellings only, although through the years several dollar-conscious developers have tried to break this precedent. Broadmead Farms purchased this property fully aware of this restriction. Why should this be changed now simply to facilitate the making of greater profit by a subsidiary of a wealthy corporation.

The "few dozen residents" mentioned were closer to 1,400. I attended the hearing and where your obviously absent reporter states, "the residents were livid, some almost hysterical," is the grossest prevarication I have ever heard.

Cadboro Bay residents presented many and varied briefs against the development, and they were all intelligent, thought-provoking and completely reasonable; no emotionalism was shown, just profound concern.

May I suggest your writer check his facts before giving vent to such a biased opinion. — Betty M. Smith, 3916 Benson Road.

Lottery Accounting

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy's excuse that it was okay to use lottery funds to build a foot bridge over a river in a Social Credit riding because a child had drowned there won't wash. Of course the bridge was necessary, but it should have been built out of highways ministry funds.

The real issue is that the government has now started to use these funds for projects other than culture, health and recreation, and no list is ever published in any government document showing what and where the projects are or how much was paid out and who received it. Mrs. McCarthy has personal control over the millions in the fund and the public has a right to know where their money goes.

It is not good enough for her to reveal as she has done that $1.26 million has been spent from lottery funds on "miscellaneous." A one and a quarter miscellaneous million! Has it all been spent in areas with Social Credit MLAs? And what has it been spent on? This is public money, not Mrs. McCarthy's personal political fund, and sanctimonious emotion won't erase the real issue — public accountability — Gordon Townsend, 927 Walker Street.

Podiatrists Needed

It was with sadness that I learned the University of Victoria senate did the only thing possible Nov. 1 and shelved plans for a B.C. school of optometry.

The senate and UVic president Dr. Howard Petch, who has invaluable experience with such a school from his days at the University of Waterloo in Ontario, are right to be perplexed at the limited opportunities for B.C. students to enter the professions. Dr. Petch is also correct in his admonition that the situation is the same when it comes to the other allied professions.

A case in point is podiatry, my own branch of this medical group. This is a limited specialty responsible for people's foot-health, particularly our retired citizens.

There is no doubt in my mind of the very great and urgent need for more podiatrists; just ask Duncan, Nanaimo, Vernon and Prince George. Dr. Banks, in his interesting and informative lecture at UVic on Oct. 23 last, if my notes are correct, stated that a major problem in Victoria's hospitals during October was that nearly a third of all acute care beds were occupied by chronic care patients.

I believe if we had more podiatrists we could help with this problem. For the U.S. Diabetic Association and the Mayo Clinic studies show that the podiatrist, as an important member of the team in preventive medicine, is equal to the saving of three acute care hospital beds.

My colleagues and I met in 1974 with the then minister of health, and we advanced a strong case for B.C.'s own school of podiatry. I have heard of no new developments in this area. For 25 years, we have been writing and talking about such a school. During this time New Zealand has had a new school of podiatry, Australia has recently accepted students for its second school in Brisbane, the UK recently opened new schools in Durham and Huddersfield — a total of nine schools in Britain. South Africa plans a first school to open in 1980, and the U.S. has plans for a proposed new school in tha state of Texas, with expanded programs in Cleveland and at Temple University.

Canada does not have one school of podiatry — the only modern industrial society in such a position. We must go to the U.S. and U.K. for graduates. As Premier Bennett ably demonstrated at the constitutional conference in Ottawa, we do not have to wait or look eastwards for guidance. We are able to show leadership qualities of our own. Indeed it well may be the year 1980 will see the western provinces leading the rest of Canada along a rosier path than we now tread. — A. Edward Cole, D.P.M., 205 Cook Street.

A Better Show

On long non-stop flights it has become customary to lower the small blinds that allow passengers to watch the blue sky and the lovely clouds above and beyond, and show an approximately two-hour movie. No one, of course, is compelled to listen to the audio and follow the video, but all are deprived of the grandiose spectacle of celestial infinity.

All major airlines have special sections for smokers and non-smokers: why not reserve a few seats for travellers who would rather be immersed in the contemplation of nature's wonders, rather than watch a movie? We can see movies all the time if we want, both in theatres and on television, while grounded on earth.

But on the rare occasions when we fly high above, some of us would enjoy and cherish a different, new, serene experience. — E.J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

WCC Out of Step

I am not quite sure to whom Harold Allen is referring when he quotes "All out of step but our Jimmie," (Out of Step; Times, Oct. 30) but after watching the W5 program Oct. 29 it would seem to be those leaders of church bodies in Canada supporting the World Council of churches funding of terrorists based in Gambia, Mozambique and Angola. Between 80 per cent and 90 per cent of the parishioners polled in one of these Canadian churches were opposed to their contributions being used to support the terrorists invading Rhodesia.

Perhaps Mr. Allen could explain the type of "humanitarian aid" the WCC is giving to the refugees of the conflict and how it is being channelled to the needy. It would seem that the churches are not too concerned about the possibility of this money being used for subversive purposes rather than the intended "humanitarian aid." Perhaps some of this money could be donated to the South African defence force to help feed, house and clothe the many refugees (yes, they're black too!) fleeing SWAPO forces in southern Angola.

The claim by Mr. Allen that missionaries in Rhodesia have been killed by black troops from the Rhodesian Army has no substance whatsoever and is simply a ploy by those responsible for the atrocities to discredit these soldiers. This claim is almost as absurd as that of Nkomo, when he claimed responsibility for shooting down a civilian plane and then denied that his gang of thugs had murdered most of the survivors.

I can assure Mr. Allen that not a single cent has come from my pocketbook to support the missionaries, nor will there be any forthcoming until I can be assured that such funds would be used by the church to educate and teach Christianity to the blacks in Rhodesia. The thought that money donated by me might be used to buy arms and ammunition to kill and maim innocent Rhodesians is absolutely repugnant. — Lauchlan M. Glen, 3137 Qu'Appelle Street.

Pope Links Faith, Politics

By STEPHEN S. ROSENFELD
The Washington Post

Cardinal Wojtyla was reading a Marxist philosophical review during the conclave that made him Pope John Paul II. It suggests where one focus of his papacy will be, and how he intends to assert the claims of his faith first of all on the level of ideas.

The rise of a Polish cardinal to the papacy was, of course, instantly recognized as a vital event in the intertwined fates of communism and the Catholic Church. It made many people recall a remark attributed to Stalin: "How many divisions has the pope?" Unfailingly, they noted that the Soviet dictator spoke it "contemptuously," their intent being to show that the church has proved to be more of a match than Stalin ever figured.

The element of calculation is still strong in the mutual approaches of Catholics (and other religious groups) and communists. It seems incontrovertible, moreover, that the new pontiff has many divisions, ones well suited for the mobile, multi-front ideological competition that is now the international norm.

The starting fact is that, strictly on the level of the allure of ideas, Soviet-bloc (and Chinese) Marxism — as distinguished from raw power — is barren and fading. That does not have to be demonstrated any more. Meanwhile, the ideas of various churches are coming on strong. Catholicism's appeal through Eastern Europe has been widely analyzed in recent days. Islam is in the throes of a revival.

One can further say that Marxism is only one of several secular faiths found wanting in the West as in the East, and that there is a rejection of materialism and an unsatisfied yearning for spirituality evident among people almost everywhere. It is reflected, surely, in the U.S. choice of a religious man as president, and in the global debate on human rights.

A happening like John Paul's elevation that touches so directly both the world of faith and the world of politics is bound to intensify the relationship between them — by making more immediate and vivid and acceptable the claims of the world of faith.

This will surely pile up fresh complications for authoritarian regimes. Already strong, native (not Vatican) Catholic claims in Poland can only expand in the state sphere as well as the religious sphere. The regime will be harder put to use repression in response.

For the Soviet Union, the accession of a Polish cardinal — no matter that his culture and new office make him a universal figure — removes the curse that Christinity is a Western force. Thus will the demands of a second religious constituency, Christians as well as Jews, begin to be internationalized — and to vex the Kremlin.

In the new pope, West European Eurocommunists will have an antagonist who knows their shabbier tendencies well and who signifies a personal faith unspoiled by collusion with state power. It will be an interesting equation, an unpredictable one.

Already in Latin America (and Spain) the church is throwing off its old allegiance to feudal power and playing the vanguard role in social modernization that Marxist parties once pretended to. John Paul, from a workingman's background and a workingman's state, appears fit to ride those currents.

But it would be wrong to look for the international effects of John Paul's papacy strictly in terms of how it plays out tactically in one place or another. That will be important, but in any tactical situation, there are always a whole lot of factors working.

What seems more important is the effect he could have in evoking, or further evoking, the erratic but evident tendency in the world to challenge secular values with spiritual or religious values. This goes beyond the fortunes of this or that church. It is a fuzzy thing, but potentially powerful, affecting the moral atmosphere, in which political choices are framed.

I wonder if Americans are ready to cope with ideas like these. Most foreign-policy professionals, when they consider them at all, put them down to personal idiosyncracies, like Carter's religiosity or Zbigniew Brzezinski's Polish Catholic background. I think we should be tuning up our antennae to receive new vibes.

The Science Fiction Lie

By ROBERT FULFORD

It took me a long time to figure out why I found Close Encounters Of The Third Kind a depressing movie, and why I found the response to it even more depressing. The reviews, you remember, called it "optimistic" and "hopeful," and saw its magnificently crafted ending — when the funny little people from outer space briefly visit earth — as essentially heart-warming. Even those critics who resisted the tired cliches of Star Wars found Close Encounters irresistibly attractive.

Yet that very attractiveness seems to me quite sad. The message of Close Encounters is that something beautiful is going to happen, and that it will involve science and outer space. A dimension of greatness and spirituality will be added to life, through the activities of extra-terrestial creatures and those on earth who believe in them.

This is, in essence, the message of the whole science-fiction industry. It comes to us through TV, movies, novels, magazine pieces. It constitutes the main intellectual strategy for the people who create science fiction and the people who consume it. It comes shining through the pages of Omni, a new magazine which arrived on the newsstands last month, and, at $2 a copy, brings sience fiction out of its old cheap newsprint journals to meet science fact in an atmosphere of slick paper and expensive advertising.

This general message seems to me a lie, and also an evasion.

It is a lie because — so far as anyone can tell now — all the billions being spent on space exploration do almost nothing for the human beings who provide the money, will do nothing for them in the foreseeable future, and possibly will never do anything for them.

It is an evasion because it amounts to a turning-away from the genuine problems of life on earth which humanity is so clearly failing to confront. Science will save us, is the message this whole industry delivers. Wrong. We will save ourselves, or not be saved.

The dream of space adventure and limitless scientific progress is the great obsession of the late 20th century. It may also be madness. Possibly, a few centuries from now, our descendants will look back on our dream of outer space and see it as a form of mass craziness — the way we, for instance, look back on the Crusades 900 years ago as an example of general hysteria. During the Crusades a whole civilization invested its dreams and its resources in conquering the Holy Land, for no sane purpose. It was an expense of spirit perhaps not equalled until our own time.

Space travel, like the Crusades, is a flamboyant romantic fantasy which offers escape from glum reality.

Bob Guccione, who created Penthouse and Viva, and came to world fame by popularizing close-up photos of vulvas, has now turned his attention not only to science fiction but to that whole world of science and near-science that seems somehow related to fiction. The first issue deals with UFOs, plans for cities in space, drugs that may increase intelligence, people who freeze their bodies so that they can be unfrozen when medicine has advanced, robots, and more.

As a magazine it's handsome, like Guccione's other magazines, but the content feels thin.

The fiction is curiously old-fashioned. A Theodore Sturgeon story begins: "He was sleek and he was furry; he was totally amphibious, and Althair the Adventurer was what he really was. However, he was known, on his lovely planet Ceer, as Althair the Storyteller..."

The articles all seem to be exploring fields that have been covered extensively before, and in almost the same way — the piece on UFOs, for intance, recalls half a dozen that I've read or glanced at in the last year or so. Guccione, as editor, gives the impression of approaching his subject from the outside, hoping to cash in on the fashion that has given us so many space movies and TV shows and will soon give us more.

You could call Omni in one sense a typical Guccione product — it's the pornography of science. It provides the titillation and fantasy of science without the real thing, as his other magazines provide the titillation and fantasy of sex without the real thing.

And it contains, as a slogan, what has been for years the favorite lie of the SF people. Omni's promotion material declares: "The science fiction of your childhood is the science fact of taday." Not true, except in a few unimportant ways. Science fiction has traditionally presented a universe of endless marvels in which science provided for mankind limitless possibilities. Most of that, so far, remains a dream — and is likely to remain so.

What Omni calls "science fact" has turned out to be mainly oppressive and potentially destructive, a series of ways to control the population of the earth while simultaneously keeping it poor and threatening it with total extinction. No wonder so many of us choose to turn away to deluded notions of adventures in some other kind of world.

Wrong Kind Of Pressure

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — How would you feel if you read in your paper that the trade union movement in France was sending cash to support the Parti Quebecois?

Or that a union in the United States was providing equipment for a separatist party in Western Canada?

Or worse, that "freedom fighters" in a Third World country had decided to aid and assist some new version of the FLQ in Quebec?

Probably you would be annoyed, perhaps even outraged, at that sort of interference in Canada's internal affairs. After all, there's often quite a fuss in the papers when it turns out that the Liberal party is collecting funds from Canadian subsidiaries of foreign corporations.

But Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, says openly that he intends to steer the union movement toward a policy of active intervention in the affairs of foreign countries.

He explained his views in an interview with his old friend Stephen Lewis, former leader of the Ontario New Democrats, in Forum, a sprightly magazine published by Canadian University Service Overseas.

Lewis asked: "What happens in a case such as Falconbridge in Namibia, which clearly condones apartheid and has racist dealings with its work force? Or with Inco in Indonesia, where the suppression of political rights is notorious and chronicled by Amnesty (International)? What can the congress do around circumstances like that where there is both a corporate and governmental abdication?"

McDermott replied: "The congress will bring to bear whatever pressures it has at the government level. But, probably more importantly, it can encourage its affiliates to take certain direct action against the parent companies here in Canada. That's the way we do it. When Massey Ferguson got themselves into deep trouble in Spain, for example, we took on Massey Ferguson in Brantford, Ont., on the issue . . . We went into collective bargaining and put it on the bargaining table — threatened certain things. We made a lot of waves. We said the men will quit working overtime this week. It got Massey Ferguson to the point where they made some phone calls to Spain. . . ."

Let's be clear about this. McDermott was not talking primarily about mobilizing labor to put pressure on the Canadian government to use its influence abroad. That would not only be legitimate, but also desirable: There's not nearly enough debate on foreign policy issues in this country.

Nor was he discussing how unions can deal with multinational corporations which offset the pressure of a strike in one country by shifting production to a plant in another country. In such circumstances, it's natural and fair for unions to co-operate across national borders to confront the corporation.

McDermott was responding to a question about political issues in foreign countries. He was saying in effect that when the congress does not like the internal policies of a foreign government, it will try to apply pressure by industrial action in Canada.

McDermott and his supporters can argue that they direct support only to good causes — that is, to "freedom fighters" opposing "oppressive governments." But who is to decide who are the good guys and who the bad?

Not the elected representatives of the Canadian people, it seems. The CLC is not content to initiate a debate on foreign policy and to pressure the government to adopt a foreign policy to its liking. It claims the right to make its own policy, supporting the causes of which it approves, and the opponents of those of which is disapproves.

That's perfectly legal and, according to your political point of view, may even be noble in most cases. But if all the private organizations in Canada and in foreign countries were to exercise the same freedom of judgment and action, international relations would be reduced to anarchy.

Certainly we would have no cause to object if foreign corporations and trade unions decided to take sides in our internal disputes and to support their friends with moral and material aid.

Death of an Assassin

By JAMES M. MARKHAM

MADRID — The reported death last month of Ramon Mercader, the Spanish Communist who murdered Len Trotsky with an ice axe in 1940, has stirred faint, guilty murmurs in the Spanish left, and a notable silence among embarrassed Communists.

Neither Mundo Obrero, the official organ of the "Eurocommunist" party, nor La Calle, a Communist-leaning weekly, has reported or commented on Mercader, who is said to have died on Oct. 18 of bone cancer in a Havana hospital.

The shadowy Mercader, recruited by Stalin's intelligence agency GPU to murder the legendary Bolshevik and founder of the Red Army, is a difficult legacy for Spanish Communists, who today pride themselves on their independence from Soviet dictates.

Moreover, too much probing into the 65-year-old Mercader's past risks linking it with the earlier incarnations of Spanish Communists who today hold positions of some authority. In a savage autobiographical unburdening published last year, Jorge Semprun, a former Communist, hints strongly that Gregorio Lopez Raimundo, the grandfatherly president of the Catalan Communist Party, knows details about the GPU's ties to the Catalan Mercader.

A successful novelist, Semprun titled one of his pieces of fiction, published in 1969, "The Second Death of Ramon Mercader." Last month he penned a brief political obituary in a Madrid daily called "The Last Death of Ramon Mercader" in which he asked:

"And today, in this day of Ramon Mercader's death, after so many decades of obstinate and fierce silence, will the companions of youth of this self-sacrificing comrade speak? Will they tell us, now without risk, punishment, or glory, the truths of his distant past, will they explain to us, finally, the many things they know about that epoch?"

So far, only two people have taken up Semprun's rhetorical invitation. In its cover story, the leftist magazine Triunfo last week carried two articles that remind today's Communists that Mercader, an enthusiastic young communist who fought and was wounded in the civil war, was only one of many who blindly followed Stalin.

"One has to have lived those years of deformation, critical years lived by so many of us, to understand to what point all of we 'official' Communists of those days were guilty of Trotsky's death," writes Ricardo Munoz Suay, a former Communist, who urges that others, too, dig into their memories. "Ramon Mercader was one more, but the other executioners — we don't even know their names."

Teresa Pamies, a Communist who knew Mercader during the civil war, discloses that she and others believed Stalin's assertion that Trotsky was a "Fascist agent," and kept their silence when they recognized photographs of the assassin, who maintained during 20 years in a Mexican prison that he was a Belgian named Jacques Mornard. Blowing this cover story, she writes, would have "harmed the party and, above all, the Soviet Union."

Miss Pamies, too, suggests that Mercader's example should prompt communists to understand how "a militant could have been used for a crime coolly prepared in Beria's laboratories against a political dissident." But she seems to admire Mercader's stoic, "intelligent" silence. "Any editor would have offered him millions for a book entitled, 'How and why I killed Trotsky,' " she writes.

"It is not a question of making an apology for the assassin saying that he was a militant, but Mercader's case cannot be treated as if he were a Dillinger," Miss Pamies asserts, somewhat defensively. "It has political implications."

It was only in 1952 that Mercader's cover story was broken. Prison guards heard the convicted assassin humming a lullaby in his native Catalan — a language known by few Belgians — and investigations quickly led back to Spain, where Franco's police turned up a hefty old file on Mercader, including his fingerprints.

According to several accounts, it was Mercader's strong-willed Cuban-born mother, Caridad Del Rio, an early communist militant with ties to the GPU even before the civil war, who persuaded him to work for Stalin's secret police, probably in 1938.

Two years later, after having stealthily introduced himself into Trotsky's confidence by becoming a lover to one of his secretaries, Mercader murdered him in the old Bolshevik's fortified exile at Coyoacan, Mexico. "They've got something on me, they've imprisoned my mother!" Mercader screamed as Trotsky's bodyguards pummeled him, according to the historian Isaac Deutscher.

In 1945, Caridad Del Rio reportedly went to Mexico on a Cuban passport to plead for clemency for her son with Lazaro Cardenas, the former Mexican president whom she knew from a previous mission on behalf of the embattled Spanish republic. He refused to see her.

In the early 1960s, according to Semprun, Caridad Del Rio was working as a receptionist in the Cuban embassy in Paris, but lost the job after some Cubans protested against this "indecent" display of the assassin's mother. Miss Pamies says she died in Paris three years ago.

One of Mercader's brothers, Luis, recently returned to Spain from the Soviet Union, and said that his brother wanted above all "to return to Barcelona, even if only to sweep its streets." But, if Ramon Mercader is in fact dead, this pleasure seems to have been denied him.

His body is said to have been transported to Moscow. Last year, the Soviet Union declared him a national hero and awarded him the Star of Gold. Stalin had already garlanded his mother with the Order of Lenin.

Miguel Romero, a leader of Spain's main Trotskyite organization, the Communist Revolutionary League, said he was not certain that Mercader was truly dead. "But we have nothing against him personally," said Romero. "It was a political crime."

"It's a troubling story for the Communist party," said the Trotskyite. "It shows up the bad conscience of its militants. Because they know that any militant of that period could have done this crime — they were all Stalinists."

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market remained mixed in moderate mid-afternoon trading today.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 1.98 million shares compared with 2.08 million at the same time Wednesday.

Among industrials, Grafton Group declined 1 to $31½, Dome Petroleum 1 to $72¾, Falconbridge Nickel Mines A 1 to $31½, Interprovincial Steel and Pipe ⅝ to $16⅞ and Alcan Aluminium ½ to $38½.

Great Lakes Paper gained 1⅝ to $33⅞, Husky Oil 1⅛ to $34⅜, Calgary Power A 1 to $37⅞, Rothmans of Pall Mall 1 to $20.

Rio Algom fell ¾ to $34¾, Ego Resources ⅝ to $5⅞ and Agnico-Eagle Mines ⅜ to $5⅜. United Siscoe Mines rose ¼ to $8¼ and Brenda ¼ to $14.

Numac Oil and Gas slipped ⅝ to $24, Asamera Oil ¼ to $15 and Voyager Petroleums ¼ to $14¾. Total Petroleum North America advanced 1¼ to $15 and Merland Exploration ⅜ to $7⅞.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today in an erratic session, losing some of the momentum of Wednesday's late rally.

But gainers held a 2-to-1 lead over losers in the broad tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market showed no strong response either way to President Carter's early-afternoon news conference in Kansas City, which produced no surprises involving the economy.

CATTLE

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. at the Calgary public stockyards of 1,050 head saw a heavy run of slaughter heifers with the usual supply of slaughter steers and cows.

A1-2 slaughter steers sold steady with sales to $63. Slaughter heifers traded $1 lower, with poor quality and conditioned heifers $2 lower. All grades of slaughter cows traded steady with one package of grain-fed D1s at 48.50.

A1-2 over 1,000 pounds 60-62.50, under 1,000 pounds 59-60.50. A1-2 heifers over 850 pounds 59-60, under 850 pounds 58-59. D1-2 cows 45-47, D3 43-45, D5 39-43. There were too few feeder cattle or stock calves sold to quote prices. Feeder cows sold steady from 43-55.

The Calgary stockyards will be open as usual Friday and Mondays on the Rememberance Day holiday.

Husky Oil

Husky Oil Ltd. has reported record earnings of $39.1 million for the first nine months of 1978, up from $32.7 million for the same period last year.

The company, which recently annnounced a five-year, $450-million plan to accelerate development of its heavy crude oil reserves in Alberta and Saskatchewan, said Monday that per-share earnings rose to $3.54 from $3.16.

Sales and operating revenue were $524.8 million, up 12 per cent, while cash from operations rose 14 per cent to $85.4 million.

James Nielson, company president, said in a statement that the increase in earnings was due to improved petroleum operations and some improvement in steel and carbon activities.

Husky's gross crude oil production for the first three quarters of this year was 47,900 barrels a day, up from 47,500 barrels, while gross natural gas production declined to 81.2 million cubic feet a day from 81.5 million.

One of the goals of the Husky five-year program is to increase oil production in the Lloydminster region by 20,000 barrels a day, doubling present production in that region.

C & E Trust

Central and Eastern Trust Co. reports net income of $5,246,000 or $.98 cents a share in the nine months ended Sept. 30, a decrease in both earnings and income over the same period a year earlier.

In an unaudited financial statement issued here, the company says the recent series of interest rate increases has narrowed its net interest spread to 1.73 per cent this year compared to 1.84 per cent in 1977.

Westcoast

Westcoast Transmission reported net income of $33.6 million for the nine months ended September 30, an increase from $31.6 million in the corresponding period of 1977.

Share earnings after provision for preferred share dividends, were 91 cents, up from 88 cents. Consolidated operating revenues were $583.3 million, an increase of 12.2 percent from $519.8 million.

While Westcoast mainline natural gas sales were up substantially in dollar terms to $479.9 million from $422.4 million in the period under review, sales volume was down to 243 billion cubic feet from 261 billion cubic feet. The anomaly was due to two price increases: one in September 1977 raising the export price to $2.16 (U.S.) from $1.94 (Canadian) a thousand cubic feet and a domestic increase on March 1, 1978 of 21 cents a thousand cubic feet to an average price of $1.15 to the British Columbia gas distributors.

Investors

The Investors Group and its wholly-owned subsidiaries have reported earnings of $7,465,000 in the first nine months of 1978, up from the $5,952,000 for the same period last year.

Consolidated net operating income for the first three quarters of 1978 was $20,370,000, compared with $14,764,000 in the earlier period. Earnings a share, after allowing for preferred dividends, were $1.48, up from $1.05.

The company's share of Great West Life earnings was $10,066,000, a $3,475,000 increase over last year. Investors' holdings in Great West Life have increased to 95.7 per cent from 50.1 per cent.

Nordair

Nordair reported net earnings for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1978, of $3,307,000, or $1.51 a share, compared with $2,284,000, or $1.08 a share, for the corresponding period in 1977.

The airline also announced that it will begin its new service between Montreal, Toronto, Sault Ste. Marie, Thunder Bay, Dryden and Winnipeg on Feb. 4, 1979.

Part of that route has been served by Transair of Winnipeg, which was required to drop the service because of its takeover by the Alberta government-owned Pacific Western Airlines.

Air Canada's offer to buy Nordair through the aquisition of the airlines outstanding shares at a base price of $11.50 awaits approval by the federal cabinet.

Simpsons

Simpsons Ltd. net sales for the nine months ending Oct. 4, 1978, increased 6.2 per cent over the same period last year, to $461,845,000 from $434,758,000, the company said in a statement. Net earnings for the nine months including the company's equity in Simpson-Sears Ltd. and other companies increased 69 per cent, to $10,793,000, or 23 cents a share, before a non-recurring gain of $256,000, compared with $6,387,000, or 13.6 cents a share, last year.

TransCanada

TransCanada PipeLines reported net income of $70,750,000 or $1.77 a share for the first nine months of 1978, up from $63,769,000 or $1.64 a share for the same period in 1977.

In a report to shareholders, James W. Kerr, chairman and chief executive officer, said that operating revenues were $1.6 billion, up from $1.36 billion a year ago. Cost of natural gas sold, gathering charges and acquisition costs were $1.25 billion, up $204 million over the same period last year.

Before the Judge

The preliminary hearing into charges of unlawful confinement, armed robbery and possession of stolen property against a Victoria couple began Wednesday in provincial court.

Deborah Jane Mavis Frank, 21, and Peter Larsen, 29, were charged in connection with the June 16 confinement of William James Taylor, manager of the liquor store at 1087 McKenzie, the armed robbery of the Saanich liquor outlet, and possession of $14,500 in bills from the alleged holdup.

The hearing opened before Judge Blake Allan but had to be adjourned until today to fix a date for continuation.

Judge Fred Green handed out a one-year prison term to a 47-year-old man but said he would recommend the term be served in the Alouette River prison unit where treatment for alcoholism can be received.

Gerald Davis, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to theft of a tape recorder, tapes and a remote control device from a University of Victoria hut Oct. 28.

Crown counsel Richard Anthony told the court Davis had been working in the hut on the day the items went missing. The next day, Anthony said, Davis was seen again near the hut and was held for police.

Anthony said Davis told police he sold the items for $18 to buy wine and a meal.

Davis had 25 previous convictions for break-ins and thefts and, for his last conviction in December of 1974 for two counts of breaking and entering and one count of theft under $200, he received a total of 2½ years in jail.

Defence lawyer Robert Johnston said Davis "steals in order to continue to drink" and asked Green to note that Davis had little or no alcoholic counselling when he was serving a term in penitentiary.

Green imposed the sentence and said he would recommend Davis be sent to Alouette River. He also placed him on one year's probation.

An 18-year-old Regina youth was charged with escaping from the Law Courts building jail facilities Oct. 12.

Richard Monette is alleged to have kicked his way out of the holding cells at 850 Burdett while 10 other inmates in the same cell watched and escaped after breaking an unbarred window.

Fined for drinking-driving were: Jerri Dub, 35, of 485 Lampson, $350; and Barrie Wayne Olson, 26, of 231 Virago Crescent, $300.

In addition, Dub was ordered to perform 150 hours of community service work.

Probation For Forger

Sandra Lorene Callioux, 28, was placed on probation for 18 months Wednesday after her conviction for dealing in a forgery.

County court Judge Leslie Cashman suspended sentence in what he called a last chance for the woman who is making a new home in Edmonton.

The offence took place in Victoria Sept. 9, 1977, when Callioux presented a government of Canada cheque for $711.40 in the name of Joe Shopa, knowing the endorsement to be forged.

Food Probe Here Next Week

The People's Food Commission will hold hearings in Victoria next week.

They will be conducted in the Student Union Building lounge at the University of Victoria Nov. 17 from 7:30 to 10 p.m. and Nov. 18 from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. and will be open to the public.

The commission, sponsored by the Anglican, Roman Catholic and United Churches, the Canadian Labor Congess, YWCAs and various other organizations, has been holding hearings across Canada.

Victoria co-ordinator Nancy Stewart said the commission's aim is to formulate a food policy.

"It isn't government financed and its working groups across the country are all volunteers."

She said the commission wants to know why food prices are so high and why farmers are going broke.

She said the commission will endeavor to get government to do something to solve some of Canada's major food problems after it completes its inquiry.

"The commissioners will prepare a report to be submitted to all the groups who have participated at the hearings," she said.

"From there we will press for implementation of the report's recommendations."

She said it is important to get people within the community to express to the commission their common concerns about food.

"So far 19 groups and individuals from the Greater Victoria area and Duncan have already indicated their intention to present their perspectives and concerns relating to food," she said.

Harvest Fair Saturday

Continuous puppet shows, pony rides and hay rides for children are just a few of the features at a Harvest Fair on Saturday and Sunday at the Sacred Heart Church hall, 4040 Nelthorpe.

Father Guy Merveille hopes to raise $10,000 during the two-day event with all of the going to charities.

The fun starts at 11 a.m. each day and on Saturday there will be a dance from 9 to 11 p.m., accompanied by hot food and cold ale.

On Sunday, spaghetti dinners, complete with salads, desserts and wine, will be served at 5 and 7 p.m.

To help set the harvest fair theme even live cows will be on hand. Foods of various nations will be on sale, as well as hundreds of articles ranging from arts and crafts to such items as house plants and records. Other events include a fish pond and fashion show.

"The main thing is to give fun to people and allow them to do their Christmas shopping," Merveille says.

Peking Goes Underground

HONG KONG (AP) — China is building underground cities in Peking, according to Communist newspapers in Hong Kong.

The papers said the cities include air raid shelters, hotels, restaurants and garages.

Quoting Peking's official Hsinhua news agency, the papers said the cities can save lives in the event of air attacks and and are less vulnerable to earthquakes.

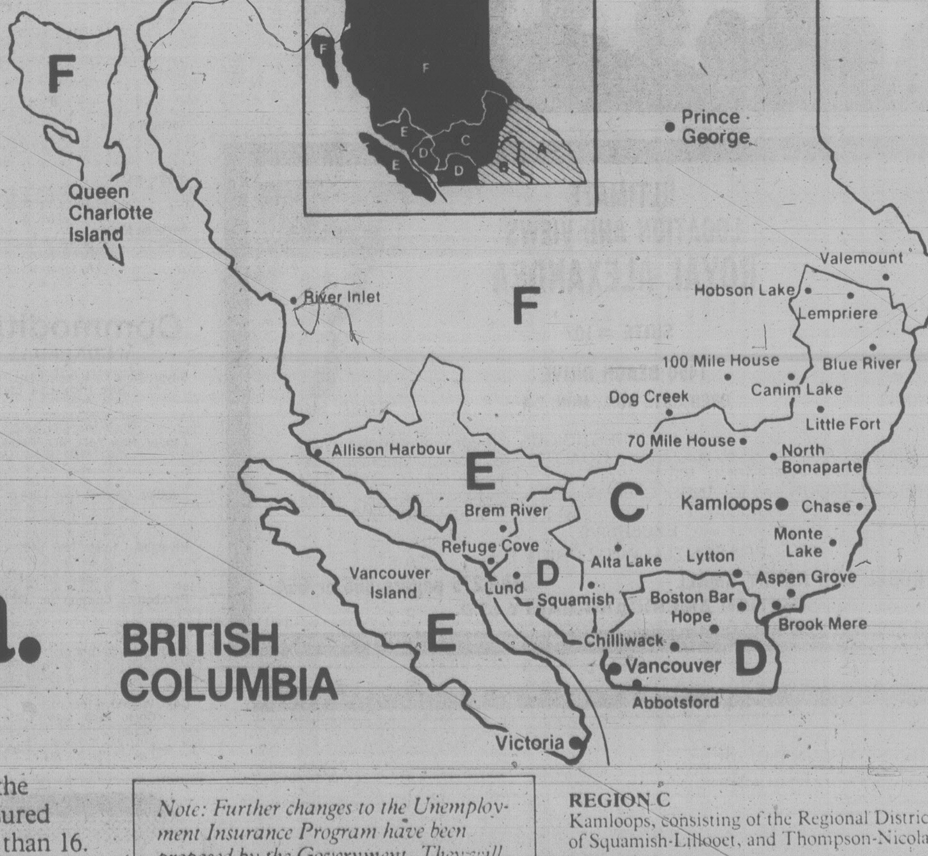
Unemployment Insurance is now more responsive to conditions in British Columbia.



To make your Unemployment Insurance Program more responsive to the special needs of different areas of Canada, there are now 48 economic regions for UI. (Up to now, there were 16 regions.)

With this change, UI benefits will more accurately reflect your local employment conditions.

It's all part of a plan announced over a year ago.

Each of these new 48 regions will have its own unemployment rate. This will set the length of time a claimant must have worked to become eligible for Unemployment Insurance benefits. And it will govern the length of benefits as well.

There's nothing new about the system itself—it's just being measured more finely in 48 regions, rather than 16.

The length of time a claimant must work to get UI remains the same. It varies from 10 to 14 weeks, depending on the unemployment rate where the claimant lives. And regionally-based benefits have the same maximum.

The change will only affect those whose UI claims start after November 12.

This map and the information with it will show you the new economic boundaries in your area.

Clip the map and save it for reference, if you like.

Note: Further changes to the Unemployment Insurance Program have been proposed by the Government. They will come into effect only when they have been enacted by Parliament.

The Veterans: Memories Flood Back

IT'S all in the distant past now. The roar and the whine of shells, the filth, misery and death, the anguish and the fear are only faint echoes in the memories of the dwindling band of survivors of the First World War.

But as Remembrance Day approaches, scenes and images flicker back like snippets from an old movie as the veterans recall what it was like to be part of what was called the war to end all wars.

For 97-year-old Mary Ann Staley, the peal of cathedral bells proclaiming the end of the war ring out in memory.

Miss Staley was a nurse stationed in Rouen, France, when peace was declared and she remembers how the bells of a nearby cathedral pealed out the news.

All around her patients were laughing and hugging each other.

English women played an active role in the war either by staying home and making armaments and working in other manufacturing plants, or going overseas in military units or as nurses or secretaries.

Miss Staley, who was born in Leicestershire in 1881, trained in London and volunteered as a nursing sister in France between 1916 and 1918.

She moved to Canada in 1920 and now lives in the Royal Jubilee Memorial Pavilion.

During the war, she worked in a wooden hut that served as a field station hospital near Rouen, treating soldiers as they were brought in from the front line.

Although she didn't see the fighting, the sound of bombs and other noises of war were always present.

Badly wounded patients were kept at the little station hospital and men able to travel were sent back to England.

Former cavalryman William Walker is fond of talking over old times over a drink with some of the other war veterans.

Walker, who is 86, grew up on an English estate and joined the Derbyshire Imperial Yeomanry at an early age.

Barbed wire and trenches made it difficult for the cavalry so Walker went overseas with the first draft of infantry reinforcements.

Conditions in the trenches were horrible, Walker remembers.

"UP to the waist in mud and water. I think that's where I got a lot of rheumatism and arthritis. After the bombings, the ground was a sea of mud."

Walker was a sniper and also submitted daily intelligence reports.

Communication in the trenches was through primitive telephone gear and hand signals.

Carrier pigeons were also used a great deal and accurately relayed messages between the trenches and headquarters.

After the war, Walker spent a year in Germany with the British Army and emigrated to Canada in 1921.

Former Victoria Times managing editor Archie Wills joined the army in 1915 at the age of 23 to serve overseas.

"Everybody was doing it; my friends in high school joined up. Pretty near every one of them were killed, I was lucky."

He went to Petawawa, Ont., for three months training. Then it was over to England and on to France.

The first night in France he landed in the thick of the fighting at Vimy Ridge.

"Holy smoke, we got plastered. They threw tear gas at you and you have a gas mask on but you can't see and all in all it was a very good baptism. It taught you to keep your head down."

Conditions in the trenches were terrible. Soldier were lousy and baths impossible.

One of the few Canadians in on the capture of Mons, Wills remembers that victory clearly.

"The Germans were having such a rough time that they left during the night. So the Canadians walked in and we had our original armistice service in a square in Mons, Nov. 11, 1918."

Visions of the war crop up regularly but his most vivid recollections are of the men who served with him.

May Monica Gough was 22 when the war broke out and she remembers the effect it had on her family in Leeds, England.

Her older brother, a teacher, was a pathfinder in a machine gun corp and was wounded in France.

"My mother was in a dreadful state when she got a postcard to say she could visit her son who was in the London Hospital."

He had lost an eye and had several pieces of shrapnel embedded in his brain, but lived for about 25 years after the war.

Families in England used to send parcels to the men at the front. Food was rationed and women stood in line all day in the hope of getting a couple of ounces of tea.

New clothes were scarce and finding a pair of silk stockings was a treat.

The war separated Mrs. Gough from her husband, who was in the trenches for several years.

She worked in a factory making shell bags and occasionally went to London to visit her brother.

When peace was declared, London came alive with excited people partying and dancing in the streets. Mrs. Gough did her share of celebrating, too.

"After all, you only live once."

Robert Stewart was 22 and working for the Canadian Pacific Railway in Manitoba when he joined up in 1916.

After two years overseas, he returned to Canada and eventually went to work for the veterans' affairs department for 12 years before retiring in Victoria.

His first action in France was at Ypres where his company was ordered to hold the line. They stayed there in the trenches a few months and then marched to the Somme front.

"We had no transportation to take us at that time; we just walked or marched with a pack, I'd say at least 70 pounds."

On a good day, they would march 15 miles.

THE biggest problem in the trenches was vermin. Rats and lice abounded and there was no way to get rid of them.

Stewart was a machine-gunner and behind him Allied troops kept up a steady artillery bombardment over his head.

"They just poured ammunition in there without stopping. And if you turned your head and looked back you saw the sky lit up behind you and in front of you.

"We were all scared but didn't show it. It was a matter of not letting your fellow man know you were afraid."

Too much time in the trenches gave soldiers, including Stewart, fever and trench foot, a circulatory problem similar to frostbite.

He was hit with a piece of shrapnel, which lodged in his gum and was shot in the hand.

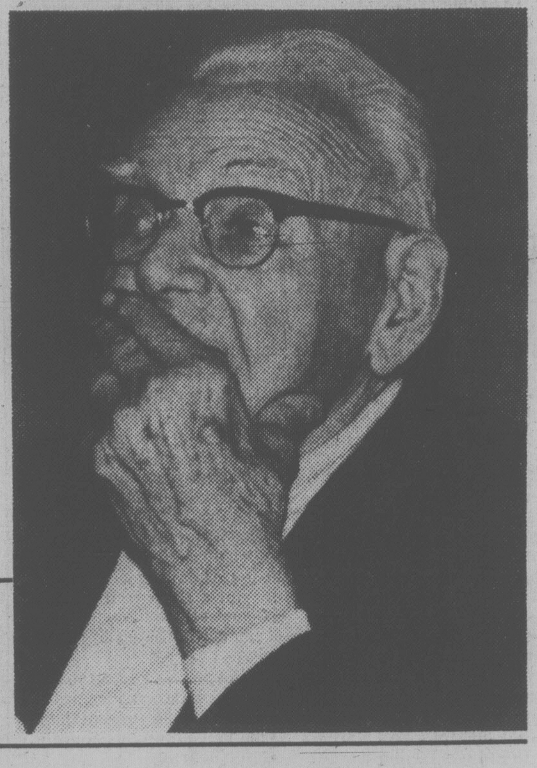
That injury sent him back to Canada before the armistice was declared.

Food was prepared at soup kitchens on wheels pulled by horses. Meals were mainly stews that tasted surprisingly good considering the cooking conditions.

Stewart, who saw several of his friends killed, feels lucky to have survived.

The First World War was a devastating experience he will never forget.

"I think it was very foolish but what can the ordinary man do about it? And you learn a lot about good friendship; maybe a little tolerance."



Ex-sniper William Walker recalls being in the trenches "up to the waist in mud and water," especially after the heavy artillery bombardments.

Former First World War nurse Mary Staley remembers the cathedral bells in France the day peace was declared.

New Meaning For Students

Remembrance Day now holds special meaning for a group of students at the Victoria Girls Alternate school.

Students of the school spent two months interviewing First World War veterans as a history project.

The school, at 3040 Fifth, is funded jointly by the Greater Victoria School District and the education ministry.

Students Pam Cox, Terrie Craddock, Alison Thompson, Mary Ann Birch, Judith Paltiel and Angie Royea, researched the project in school and talked to six persons who fought or experienced in other ways the effects of the First World War.

Tape recordings of the interviews were transcribed and used as the basis for this article.

The text will be used in a Remembrance Day magazine edition of the school newspaper.

All 20 students at the school will be involved in some way in producing the magazine, which will be published next week.

And all of them have learned a valuable history lesson they feel could not be found in any text book.

Private Beer, Wine Sales Ahead: Mair

B.C. eventually will have wine and beer stores, independent of government liquor stores, says Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair.

Mair, the minister responsible for the Liquor Distribution Branch, said the stores will be set up where required by demand, but both products still will be sold in the government-run stores.

"I don't think it's a bad idea to develop some beer and wine stores around the province," he said. "What I don't agree with is the divorcement of the two, so that you only have beer stores and liquor stores."

The minister said this would be great for the branch because it would be out of the business of selling beer.

"But I don't think the consumer would like having to go to two stores to get his requirements for the weekend."

Mair said the branch feels handling beer is a nuisance because it is bulky and has a low mark-up compared with liquor.

Waste To Go, Wenman Vows

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MP Bob Wenman said Wednesday he intends to hold Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie to a commitment to rid Surrey of radioactive wastes.

Wenman (Fraser Valley West) said the minister promised in a letter to him last summer to move radioactive material from a commercial property in the community.

The radioactive thorium wastes are not considered immediately dangerous, but Wenman said there is concern over the effects of long-term exposure to low-level radioactivity.

Gillespie told Wenman in the Commons Wednesday the federal Atomic Energy Control Board had checked the wastes, now contained in barrels, and pronounced them safe.

Finding a new site on which to store the wastes was a responsibility of the province, Gillespie said. Two provincial government departments now are studying the issue.

But Wenman said if there is a jurisdictional problem, Gillespie should get after the province. He feared the minister was trying to wiggle out of his commitment to get the wastes out of Surrey.

Gillespie also told the MP that he will consider referring the whole jurisdictional issue to a Commons committee for hearings.

Wenman said a company buying property in Surrey had found the pile of wastes, stuffed it into barrels and moved the material to the back of its property.

Ottawa Seeks Threat - Teachers

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Recruiting is under way to hire new teachers for two native Indian schools in northern British Columbia that were earlier closed following threats against the instructors.

The Ingenika day school and Fort Ware native school are closed, giving about 72 students an extended holiday.

Accord Reached

VERNON (CP) — A settlement has been reached in contract talks between Okanagan zone teachers and school boards, negotiators for both sides announced Wednesday.

The two-year agreement affecting about 2,200 teachers provides for increase of 6.9 per cent over current salaries in the first year and a further increase of 7.9 per cent in the second year.

B.C. Games Bids

Eight communities have submitted bids for the 1980 and 1981 B.C. Games, games chairman Ron Butlin said Wednesday.

He said submissions have been received from Nanaimo, Kelowna, Prince George, Vernon, Chilliwack, Kimberley, Trail and Nelson.

Three sites will be selected in the next few weeks.

GRACE PRESSING OTTAWA FOR TRADE CENTRE FUNDS

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy will lead a delegation to Ottawa at the end of the month to press for federal funding for a trade and convention centre in Vancouver.

The group is seeking a $10 million contribution from the federal government for the proposed $25 million centre.

Mrs. McCarthy noted that Ottawa provided $23 million towards a similar project in Saint John, N.B.

The minister said she is optimistic the federal government will commit the money before the Dec. 31 deadline set for the three governments to ether reach an agreement or drop the plans.

The plan calls for $10 million from each of the federal and provincial governments and $5 million from the city.

GAS ECONOMY & STANDARD FEATURES:
If you're looking to get gas economy of only 6.5 litres per 100 kilometres* out of your new wagon, you won't get it in a Pinto. But you will get it with a new 210. And a Pinto will make you pay extra for features that are standard on a 210.

TRANSMISSION CHOICE & INTERIOR ROOM:
You can't buy a Honda Civic wagon with an economical 5-speed transmission. But you can get it on the 210 Sports Wagon. And if you want a roomy interior, the 210 is more than 8 inches longer and 3 inches wider than the Civic.

All 79 Datsuns are covered by the Datsun 6 Year Anti-Rust Plan.

MANEUVERABILITY & CARGO ROOM:
You can turn a 210 Sports Wagon in only 32.8 ft. Cargo space? The 210 Sports Wagon gives you 12 cubic feet more of it than the Corolla wagon. Parking or packing—you're better off in a 210!

WHERE OTHER ECONOMY WAGONS LEAVE OFF, THE '79 DATSUN 210 KEEPS RIGHT ON GOING.

The Datsun 210 Sports Wagon – new for '79. Add it up. You're buying at least 2.0 fewer litres of gas per 100 kilometres* than you'd need to with a Pinto. Plus a much longer list of standard features.

You're getting a longer, legroomier, wider interior than you'd get in a Honda Civic wagon.

You can get a gas-saving 5-speed transmission that the Civic wagon doesn't even offer. You're getting 12 cubic feet more cargo capacity than you'd get with the Corolla wagon.

For its economy price, the '79 Datsun 210 Sports Wagon adds up to unbeatable value. And Datsun dares to put its six year anti-corrosion policy in writing.

Strike Paper Boycott Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Vancouver Board of Trade has called on businesses not to advertise in the Vancouver Express, the newspaper produced by union workers on strike or locked-out at Pacific Press Ltd.

Don Selman said Wednesday the board believes individual businesses have the right to make whatever decisions they think are appropriate to their own interests.

However, Selman said the board disagrees with members of the graphic arts industry providing services to the striking and locked-out employees. He said the actions of those members enables the workers to publish the Ex-press, and that could prolong the labor dispute.

Two unions went on strike and four others were locked out last Wednesday at Pacific Press, which produces the morning Province and the evening Sun. No talks to end the strike-lockout, which involves 1,400 workers, have been scheduled.

Meanwhile, several Province and Sun reporters have been hired by a weekly publication, B.C. Business Week, which will begin publishing Nov. 14.

Among the Sun employees included on the new paper's staff are business editor George Froelich, columnist Mike Grenby and labor editor George Dobie.

Froelich said in a news release that the aim of the publication is "to fill a void that exists for business news due to the current labor dispute at Pacific Press."

Publisher J. R. Martin said Froelich will be responsible for the editorial content of the controlled-circulation tabloid publication, which has a scheduled press run of 50,000.

B.C. Business Week will be published by Pacific Rim Publications Ltd. of Vancouver, publisher of B.C. Business Magazine.

Province publisher Paddy Sherman said Pacific Press is offering to include job protection for pressmen in a separate agreement that would not be negotiated with every contract.

Sherman said he doesn't understand the position of union leaders, who are reported to have told their members that the company's offer of job protection could be removed in the next contract.

He said such an agreement would not be subject to repeated negotiations as are working contracts.

However, Phil Needham, president of Local 115 of The Newspaper Guild, which represents editorial and other workers at Pacific Press, said the company is attempting to split the six unions in the joint council.

Needham said recent statements and advertisements, co-signed by Sherman and Sun publisher Clark Davey, describing the management position on the pressmen issue, are intended to weaken the resolve of about 800 guild members in supporting the joint council in general and the pressmen in particular.

The unions' last contracts expired Oct. 31.

Needham denied that the manning clause, which specifies the number of pressmen working on each shift, is a type of "featherbedding".

"In fact, the manning clause in the contract was brought in to avoid featherbedding . . . to make sure that men not required would not be around," he said.

The unions' last contracts expired Oct. 31.

Trustees' Proposal Rejected

CASTLEGAR (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees Wednesday rejected a proposal from four West Kootenay school boards to resume bargaining to end a strike-lockout which began Oct. 26.

CUPE national representative Fred Pyke said the school boards must come up with a new wage offer before the union will resume negotiations.

About 250 non-teaching workers are involved in the strike-lockout which has forced most schools in Nelson, Trail, Castlegar and Grand Forks to reduce operations.

The workers' last contract expired June 30.

Grain Exports Increase

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The ministry of economy says that while worldwide grain exports rose only 1.9 per cent fom 1975-76 to 1977-78, Argentina's grain exports soared 22.6 per cent. This increased Argentina's share of the global grain market to eight per cent from 6.7 per cent.

DISGUISING TRUCK BODY 'ONE-MAN CRIME WAVE'

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A part-owner of a city auto body shop who disguised a stolen 1977 truck to look like a 1974 vehicle, was given a suspended sentence with probation for two years Wednesday for possession of stolen property.

In sentencing Robert William Stephenson, County Court Judge Steven Hardinge called him a "one-man crime wave."

Stephenson pleaded guilty Oct. 2 to possession of the truck, stolen from a dealer in New Westminster in March, 1977.

RCMP Problems Bared in '69 Report: Starnes

OTTAWA (CP) — Although a royal commission had clearly identified the problems facing the RCMP security service, government, Parliament and the public showed "a woeful lack of interest" in the commission's 1969 report.

John Starnes, retired director-general of the security service, testified Wednesday that there had been only a one-day parliamentary debate on the report and that in the first five years of the 1970s, only seven references had been made to it in Parliament.

He was testifying before the McDonald royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing. Starnes said that only an idiot wouldn't have realized the security service was breaking laws in the line of duty. The law-breaking issue had been set out in the 1969 report, he said.

"I find it ironic that despite the clear statement of the need for public debate, there was little or no debate."

Starnes said he had known when he took the job in 1970 that law-breaking in the line of duty was a problem. This became even more apparent to him in coming months.

There were "endless meetings" to discuss the 1969 report and there was documentary evidence before the cabinet ministers who were sometimes involved, but no action was ever taken.

Starnes said he tried to persuade the government to bring opposition leaders into its confidence on security issues.

He said a solicitor-general faced an "impossible task" in keeping track of the security service.

Solicitors-general are responsible to Parliament for not only the RCMP and its security service but for the federal prison system and much of the criminal justice system.

As a cabinet minister, they faced a mountain of paper work. They also had constituency and party responsibilities, and they worked a 16-hour day.

Starnes said he rarely was able to get even 30 minutes with a minister, who could only rely on what Starnes or other officials told him. Although the minister had to be ultimately responsible for what happened in his department, "there is no way you can expect the minister to be familiar with every last detail."

Starnes thought it might help if the opposition was taken into the minister's confidence on "totally unpolitical" security matters, because there then would be more understanding of the problems involved.

Former Mounties Hired To Handle Complaints

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal privacy commission has hired four former RCMP officers as permanent investigators of complaints by citizens that the government is withholding personal information it keeps on them in various files.

Between them they have 1[illegible] years experience in work ranging from counter-espionage and employee security screening to organized crime investigation and airport security.

Ironically, the commission's first major investigation, scheduled to start today, involves hundreds of complaints by prisoners across the country about authorities delaying or withholding information in government files. These are files in the hands of prison officials, the Canadian penitentiary service, the National Parole Board and other agencies under the solicitor-general's department.

The man assigned to investigate the complaints is Marcel Cote, 45, who spent 30 years in the RCMP. He said in an interview that his experience with all levels of the criminal community makes him believe prisoners will not mind that he has the job.

"I've had it said to me by inmates that they would rather deal with the Mounted police than any other bull or fuzz — or whatever term they use now," he said.

Cote has worked in commercial and organized crime investigations, established a stock fraud information system in the 1960s and spent the last seven years as a top official with the Canadian Police Information Centre here. His job was to audit use and abuse of the computerized system used by different police forces to trade information.

His investigation will centre on complaints to the privacy commission by more than 200 prisoners that authorities are withholding or delaying information about them.

A correctional service spokesman said prisoners have filed 10,467 requests for files since the privacy law was enacted last March. Only 2,166 requests have been responded to.

"The sheer volume of requests has overwhelmed us." Some of the files are 500 pages thick and the authorities are removing an average eight pieces of information from every 100 pages that prisoners are permitted to see.

A correctional service spokesman, Doug Dawe, said the system is clogged up because only 35 officials, including two doctors, have been assigned to answer the flood of prisoner requests.

Icebreaker Floated Free

TUKTOYAKTUK, N.W.T. (CP) — The icebreaker John A. Macdonald, which ran aground about 500 kilometres east of this tiny Northwest Territories community, was re-floated Wednesday and sailed to a nearby harbor.

"It made it on its own steam," said Bill Payne, a spokesman for Dome Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary and its subsidiary, Canadian Marine Drilling Ltd. (Canmar), which leased the ship from the federal government last Sept. 1.

The icebreaker — Canada's second largest — ran aground on an unchartered, underwater clay pinnacle during a snowstorm on the Beaufort Sea Monday night, a ministry of transport spokesman said.

The accident occurred near Summer Harbor on Booth Island, east of Tuktoyaktuk which is about 2,300 kilometres northwest of Edmonton.

"The visibility was quite poor," said Reg Towers, public affairs manager for the ministry's Atlantic region. "It wasn't a blizzard but if you were in a car it would be like driving in driving snow."

Towers said the 18-year-old icebreaker was caught in the centre by the pinnacle, which ruptured a centre heel tank.

A heel tank is filled and unfilled with water to rock the icebreaker back and forth when lodged in ice.

No estimate on the amount of damage to the 96-metre, 15,000-horspower icebreaker was available. Towers said repairs would probably be undertaken in Summer Harbor.

He said there were no injuries to any of the 80 crew members aboard and there was no pollution involved.

Safety at Sea Probed by Lang

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang says he has received preliminary assurances there is compliance with federal rules and regulations regarding safe manning of ships at sea.

But he added in the Commons Wednesday he wants further assurances from ship owners before replying to a petition seeking more regulations sent to him by the Seamens International Union.

The issue was raised by Michael Forrestall (PC—Dartmouth-Halifax East) who asked whether the SIU petition had been received by the minister and when the union could expect a reply.

Forestal said in a later interview the SIU wants the transport department to establish safe deck-manning regulations.

There should be a certain number of employees aboard each ship trained to act in emergency situations and the standards should apply to all vessels.

"They must be concerned that a dangerous situation exists," Forrestal said.

Clark Spells Air Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative air policy would include more competition between Air Canada and CP Air on national routes and significantly increase the number of routes open to regional and third-level carriers, party leader Joe Clark said Wednesday.

He told the Commons that his government would empower the Canadian Transport Commission "to ensure safe and reliable air service for Canadians: It will not empower the commission to stifle competition."

Major national routes would be served by the two main carriers but Air Canada and CP Air would not be allowed to dominate regional and local services, Clark declared.

"Our general approach will be that regional routes of up to 300 miles and turn-around routes of up to 500 miles will be reserved for regional and third-level carriers," the Tory leader said.

Clark spoke on his party's motion condemning the government "for its failure to bring better air service to Canadians through the implementation of a competitive air policy and . . . the state takeover Nordair."

The motion was defeated 132 to 93 with the New Democratic Party supporting the government.

CP Air Seeking Maritimes

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air said Wednesday it will ask the Canadian Transport Commission for permission to serve the Atlantic provinces.

The company said in statement that if approval is received, it expects to commence service with at least two and possbily three Boeing 737 direct flights daily to Halifax from Toronto.

The statement follows an earlier announcement by Transport Minister Otto Lang that restrictions on CP Air would be lifted.

The Vancouver-based airline said it expected the service will start next summer, but the exact date hinges on the availability of aircraft. CP Air has three Boeing 737s on order for delivery in May, June and July, 1979.

CP Air at present is restricted to about 25 per cent of cross-Canada traffic. It said that with the lifting of restrictions it expects a larger portion of traffic.

The company also said it wanted a correction of the inequalities om trans-border routes alloted to Air Canada.

Air Canada was allotted 11 of 12 non-regional trans-border routes while CP Air received one Vancouver to Los Angeles.

NEW PUBLISHER IN PETERBOROUGH

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — The appointment of Bruce L. Rudd as publisher and general manager of The Examiner was announced Tuesday.

He succeeds W. J. Garner, who will retire at the end of the year. Rudd's appointment takes effect immediately with Garner as a consultant until his retirement.

Rudd, 41, previously was general manager of FP Publications Ltd. He obtained a law degree and was called to the Ontario bar in 1964 before entering the newspaper business with the Ottawa Journal and Winnipeg Free Press.

He later was general manager of Lethbridge Herald, assistant to the publisher of Vancouver Sun and publisher of Calgary Albertan.

Garner joined The Examiner in 1936 as an advertising salesman.

$125 to Hear Joe on Phone?

By PAUL WHITELAW

OTTAWA — Would you pay $125 to listen in on a phone call from Joe Clark?

That's what nearly 600 people in Calgary may be doing a week from tonight.

They've already bought tickets at $125 a head to meet and mingle with the Conservative leader at a Nov. 16 fund-raising reception and dinner — only the featured speaker won't be turning up.

Clark has been forced to cancel his plans to deliver a speech at the gathering because of Finance minister Jean Chretien's announcement Wednesday that he will be bringing down a new federal budget the same night.

"We're very disappointed and our plans are up in the air," said dinner chairman John Burrows of Calgary.

Burrows, interviewed by telephone, said organizers of the dinner had "several options" and an alternative program will be chosen sometime today.

"We could postpone the dinner, go with a substitute speaker or possibly set up a telephone hook-up so Joe could speak to us," he noted.

About one thing Burrows is certain: that "no one who has bought a ticket will be wanting their money back.

"The people who've bought tickets view it as a chance to assist the party."

A Clark aide said Wednesday that David Crombie, the newly-elected MP for Toronto's Rosedale riding and a former mayor of that city, would likely fill in as guest speaker. Originally, he had been set to act as master of ceremonies.

By setting the budget for Nov. 16, Chretien has thrown into disarray Clark's plans to spend six days in his native Alberta starting next Tuesday.

The Tory leaders' schedule was still being revised late Wednesday, but it looks as if he will still fly to Edmonton the evening of Nov. 14 in time to drop in at the annual meeting of the Edmonton North Conservative Association. That's the riding represented by MP Steve Paprowski.

UGG Sets Grain Record

WINNIPEG (CP) — United Grain Growers today announced a substantial profit on operations in the crop year ended July 31 and a record in grain handling.

Mac Runciman, president of the farmer co-operative which has 20,000 members in the three Prairie provinces, told the annual meeting profits before taxes and patronage dividends were $6.9 million, up sharply from the $1.9 million in the previous year.

Grain handling at country elevators reached 4.17 million tonnes, well above the 3.73 million tonnes a year earlier. The dollar volume of fertilizer, chemicals and other farm supplies also reached a record.

The declining value of the Canadian dollar was a stimulus for higher grain and oilseed prices, Runciman said.

"A year ago Canadian wheat was offered for sale to Europe at $125 a tonne. But early October the price had risen to $165 a tonne and in Canadian terms, wheat prices rose $40 a tonne during the year."

Added performance and driving comfort: The new Fiat Brava has a 2-litre engine, plush velour interior and delivers 62 km per gal. on the highway.

If you're considering a Volvo, Saab, Peugeot, BMW or Audi

Test drive the luxurious 1979 Fiat Brava 2-Litre. Discover the value Fiat offers for around $7,000.*

Fiat is famed for efficient cars—excellent performance, economy, driveability. Now—with the 1979 Brava, Fiat's famous twin cam engine with 2-litre performance is right in the same league with imported cars costing hundreds, even thousands more.

Plush velour interior. Amazingly quiet.

And backed by a unique combination of reliability warranties that hold down the long-term cost of owning your car.

European cars in the 2-litre category have a well-deserved reputation for driver control, ride and sophisticated engineering.

But the prices! Now Fiat engineers introduce a high order of clever engineering, superb ride, lush interior finish with 2-litre power *for around $7,000.

Over the years Fiat engineers have pioneered in squeezing efficiency out of engines for Europe where gasoline prices are sky high. Now the same engineering expertise has been put to work to develop the new Brava 2-Litre: twin overhead cams milk the optimum power from the engine; handling is responsive through rack and pinion steering, McPherson Strut suspension and power assisted brakes. It's all put together with Fiat's skill at getting high performance without costing you an arm and a leg.

Fiat protects the new-car buyer's pocketbook with two remarkable reliability warranties:

1. Fiat was the first import to offer the three-year, corrosion perforation warranty.

2. Two-year (or 40,000 km) power train warranty: Fiat engineers are so sure of the dependability of the Brava engine and drive train, that Fiat has covered them with a warranty for two years (or 40,000 km, whichever comes first).

Scrap Filled Ransom Bag

MONTREAL (CP) — Two unwitting reporters carried suitcases stuffed with worthless bundles of paper to a rendezvous with the kidnappers of Charles Marion, a police investigator told jurors in the trial of Jeanne and Claude Valence Wednesday.

"On Sept. 23, 1977 I personally put $500,000 in two suitcases which were checked by (newsmen) Claude Poirier and Normand Maltais," provincial police officer Yvon Fauchon told the Quebec Superior Court hearing.

But the reporters were not present when police switched the money for bundles of newspaper, he added.

Fauchon testified he hid under a blanket in the front seat of the car in the first aborted drop off, armed with a machinegun and revolver.

With Maltais driving and Poirier in the passenger seat, the trio drove from Sherbrooke to a spot on a back road near the village of Weedon, where the suitcases were left in the middle of the road.

But as their car was pulling away, Fauchon said, they spotted a flashing red light ahead and two (unidentified) men. The policeman told the reporters to turn around and pick up the suitcases and then they drove back to Sherbrooke where they tried to re-establish contact with Marion's abductors over the citizens band radio in the car.

Fauchon said a second drop-off attempt, on Sept. 29, 1977, at Lennoxville, near Sherbrooke, also failed.

The officer said the suitcases, again stuffed with paper, were deposited by Poirier and Maltais, who then left the scene. They returned to Sherbrooke and tried unsuccessfully to contact the kidnappers over their CB radio.

The suitcases, cut open to reveal their contents, were seen by Fauchon at police headquarters the next day.

He testified that Marion's son, Pierre, carried out a successful ransom exchange on Oct. 26, 1977, accompanied by a Jean Martineau and Fauchon.

"Pierre Marion had a clear plastic bag with $10 and $20 bills, totalling $50,000," Fauchon said.

The men received written instructions from the abductors and two telephone calls before taking a circuitous route to a road near the hamlet of Island Brook, where they had been told they would find a branch with balloons attached to it embedded in the shoulder of the road, Fauchon said.

He saw a man standing in the woods about nine metres from the festooned branch, but because of the light and distance "it would be impossible to recognize him."

The men dropped off the money, returned to Sherbrooke and awaited a call that told them Marion could be found the next day at an airport near Sherbrooke.

On Oct. 27 the loans manager was found by his son, ending the 82-day abduction.

Sixth Man Still Mystery

QUEBEC (CP) — Serge Fontaine, opposition member of the national assembly, says he didn't mean to identify anybody during question period Wednesday as the alleged sixth man in a terrorist cell which kidnapped British trade commissioner James Cross in 1970.

Fontaine had asked Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard in the assembly if he would confirm that Nigel Barry Hamer is the name of the man being investigated by police as the possible sixth man who was never arrested in the affair.

Greeted by a throng of reporters as he left the assembly, Fontaine said he was merely asking Bedard for clarification on the issue.

"I simply asked the justice minister who might have participated in the kidnapping of Mr. Cross."

Fontaine, who sits for the Union Nationale in the riding of Nicolet-Yamaska, said his questions were designed to advance the cause of justice. He declined further comment.

Bedard refused to confirm or deny the name, and said at one point that it would be irresponsible to mention the name while a police investigation was going on.

Fontaine had said in the assembly that Hamer is 30 years old and an engineering teacher and resident of LaSalle, a west-end suburb of Montreal.

QUEBEC LIKELY TO DUCK REFERENDUM?

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government will probably find a pretext to back out of holding a referendum on the constitutional future of the province, Liberal Senator Jean Marchand predicted Wednesday.

But Marchand added if the government does call a referendum as promised, it will do its utmost to sooth the fears of Quebecers so they will vote "yes" to its proposals for sovereignty-association.

Marchand and Progressive Conservative Senator Jacques Flynn were the guests of honor at a wine and cheese tasting organized by the federalist pressure group, Decision Canada.

He said the Parti Quebecois government should "dissipate the uncertainty hindering the development of Quebec" as soon as possible by putting its sovereignty-association option to a vote.

Quebec Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin said Wednesday the referendum will probably be held during the fall of 1979.

Despite the former federal cabinet minister's criticisms of the PQ, Marchand found himself defending "sincere" supporters of sovereignty for the province when some members of the audience began attacking those who support the PQ's position.

Last of Big-Time Spenders Cancels Cheque

DALLAS — A mysterious Pakistani who wowed customers and staff at an exclusive nightclub to the tune of $2 million in cheques and prizes was only kidding, a spokesman for the benefactor says.

Stop-payment orders have been issued for all cheques but the $2,300 for his tab.

The visitor to the club "Elan," accompanied by two bodyguards, treated the house to expensive champagne, tipped his waitress $1 million and sponsored a dance contest, with cheques for $500,000 going to each of the two winners, one of whom was Mike Christenson (right.)

The spokesman said the $2 million in cheques to the waitress and the dancers will not be honored.

But the manager of the club said he had been assured that the big-spending would honor a cheque for more than $2,300 to pay for the outing.

The customer was identified by authorities as F. Masood Khan, who said he was president of the National Construction Co. of Pakistan and worked out of an office in Washington, D.C.

Frank Dorin of the district attorney's office said Khan's travelling secretary and bodyguard Chris Portugal said stop-payment orders have been placed on the cheques given the waitress and the dancers.

Craig Stolz, manager of the night club, said "Elan" decided to reject a $10,000 tip — also a cheque — because of policy.

"He used his gold American Express card to pay for the champagne and other activities at the club and added a $10,000 tip. But when American Express heard of the extreme amount of purchasing being done they decided to put a hold on that card," Stoltz said.

"When we told him of the hold, he immediately came over and wrote a cheque for $2,365.30. He wrote another cheque for the $10,000 tip, which we declined.

"The price already had a 15-per cent-tip built in," Stoltz said.

"We just thought the $10,000 was exhorbitant. Pakistan is sort of a poor country."

'Excuse Me, Miss, But Are the Police Looking for You?'

LONDON — A British businessman, using a rarely exercised citizen's power of arrest, Wednesday captured an armed American spinter sought by police in a murder case.

James Hazan, 45, who runs a business renting shoes to theatrical companies, challenged Alvada Kooken, a secretary at the U.S. embassy, as she waited for a taxi.

He recognized her from news photographs issued by London police, who said she was suspected of murdering a woman friend after drawing up a hate list of 30 persons against whom she had a grudge.

Hazan, on his way to collect a visa from the Israeli embassy, approached her and asked:

"Are you the American lady the English police are looking for?"

Miss Kooken said she was and Hazan later described how he seized her and said: "Madam, I'm making a citizen's arrest."

"I held her hands by her side and looked in her bag. Inside I saw a Colt gun," he said.

The Evening Standard quoted Hazan as saying the gun contained five live rounds and one spent cartridge.

Hazan then took the woman to police.

"It's a citizen's duty and I consider it my personal duty to arrest anyone wanted by the police for questioning," he said.

Talking To Nora Can Be Pretty Costly

TORONTO — These days even talk isn't cheap.

"I'd like to charge $120 an hour but that would be outrageous," Nora Weibe says.

The 32-year-old said her phone hasn't stopped ringing and she's had to take it off the hook at night since she started advertising two weeks ago for people who want to talk about any subject.

She said her clientele has been all male and usually the conversation is about sex.

Most of the men feel overpowered and fear women.

"Their sex fantasies are interesting, but boring," she said.

"Basically they're all the same . . . it just . . . goes on and on."

She said her callers don't have serious problems but need an understanding ear and someone to encourage them.

"They just need someone to pat them on the back and send them in the right direction."

That Was No Blonde . . .That Was a Navvy

LONDON — The blonde in the filmy nightdress looked a pushover to bedroom intruder Kevin Carberry.

But when he tried to molest her, she punched him in the face, clobbered him on the head with a high-heeled shoe, grabbed him in a wrestling hold and marched him off to the nearest police station.

The blonde was a former laborer who had undergone a sex-change operation.

Three for the Road
SONY.

Sony introduces three go-anywhere personal portables—a twelve inch (measured diagonally) BW TV with a glare-free screen for indoor/outdoor viewing, a super lightweight solid state TV-AM/FM combination and a travelling entertainment centre with three inch (measured diagonally) BW TV, AM/FM radio and cassette recorder.

The TV-123 is a twelve inch black & white portable equipped for AC or DC operation (with optional extra accessories). It features a quick-start picture, telescopic VHF antenna and is available in off-white and red, at a price you'll like.

Sony's TV-411 weighs less than five lbs. and packs in a four inch BW TV picture and big, rich AM/FM radio sound. This little Sony traveller can operate from house current, a car/boat battery (cord optional extra) or six "D" batteries (optional extra). There's an LED indicator for radio tuning and battery check and it comes complete with a TV screen hood for shading sunlight.

The Sony FX-340 guarantees superb entertainment wherever you go. This 3-in-1 package weighs only 8 lbs. 10 ozs. and includes solid-state BW TV, AM/FM radio and a cassette recorder. There's a 3-way meter for tuning, battery level and recording, cue & review functions for the cassette recorder as well as a 3-digit tape counter and variable level recording monitor system. It operates on AC or DC or on six "D" cells. See these Sony personal portables at your Sony dealer.

Region Backs E&N

The Capital Regional District will present a brief opposing abandonment of the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Dayliner at the Canadian Transport Commission's Nov. 15 hearing in Victoria.

Representing the regional district will be Murray Glazier, chairman of the regional planning and economic development committee; Langford director Ed Lubick, executive director Dennis Young and regional transportation planner David Langley.

The brief will endorse the concept of a downtown terminal station and commuter service between Victoria and the western community.

Western community directors said they were excited at the prospect of adding a morning and evening commuter service to the E&N run.

At a special meeting on Wednesday they were told the run from Langford would take 15 minutes. Another 10 minutes would be needed for a turnaround in Victoria before regular runs up-Island.

Pipeline Hazard Follows Flood

TERRACE (CP) — Repair crews were racing to prevent natural gas supplies in this west-central British Columbia community from running dry after a pipeline was damaged by heavy rains and strong winds.

John Lowe, spokesman for Pacific Northern Gas Ltd., said crews were repairing damage at two points in the line, and hoped a bypass pipeline could be tied into it today.

"Our supply of gas is dwindling fast," said Lowe. "There is enough for today but I'm not sure about Friday."

Company workmen had 210 metres of a 360-metre bypass line welded on Wednesday.

The damage was discovered last week after the rain and heavy runoff from the surrounding mountains resulted in flooding which disrupted the line.

In Victoria meanwhile, Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said her deputy, G. H. Cross, would be flying here today to assess and coordinate provincial action on compensation for private and public loss caused by the persistent flooding.

Mrs. McCarthy said Cross would be working with Highways Minister Alex Fraser and Ted Neale, director of the provincial emergency program, to ensure that damage claims are settled efficiently.

She said the Canadian Independent Adjusters' Conference had been called in to work with the provincial representatives in evaluating and settling claims.

"I understand from the minister of highways that the highway from Smithers to Prince George should be reopened by Friday," she said. "Everyone is working very hard to restore homes and public services to normal as quickly as possible."

Mrs. McCarthy also said the Prime Minister's office has acknowledged receipt of B.C.'s request for aid under the federal-provincial disaster financial aid program, but no decision has been made.

A second telegram was sent Wednesday to prompt a reply, she said.

Regional highways engineer Mike O'Connor said highway repair work was proceeding well after initial problems caused by continued rain after the storm last week.

The highways ministry said the Hazelton-Terrace highway was closed until further notice and the Kitwanga-Meziadin road was closed north of Kitwanga due to a washout, although a detour was available from Smithers to Kitwanga.

Answer from Cordova Bay: Preserve the Status Quo

Cordova Bay residents told Saanich officials Wednesday they don't want sewers because they want to preserve their area's rural atmosphere.

It was the clear answer to a question posed several months ago by Mayor Mel Couvelier, who asked Cordova Bay residents to decide what kind of community they wanted and whether the area should be sewered to attract additional development.

Saanich is holding sewer capacity in reserve for that purpose, but could use it elsewhere in the municipality.

Couvelier told Wednesday's meeting that resistance to change or growth by individual neighborhoods makes it difficult for the municipality to undertake any intelligent long-range planning.

"We have council members who feel each neighborhood should have the right of veto on how each of the 11 neighborhoods will grow," he said.

One resident who took exception to the mayor's remarks said Cordova Bay residents have worked hard to build their community and are tired of being tagged as a self-interest group.

"We are trying to keep our sanity in a somewhat crazy world. There may be an element of selfishness in what we are doing, but all we are attempting is to move forward toward sounder values."

Official Expects 'Yes' to Sewer

View Royal regional director Al Beasley believes fourth time round will be lucky on a sewer vote this Nov. 18.

"I've been working to get sewers in this area for 10 years and the last three votes were turned down. But I'm convinced this time it's going to go," Beasley said.

One reason for his confidence is the sum of nearly $580,000 the provincial government will be contributing toward the trunk sewer to build capacity for View Royal into the planned main the new Helmcken Road hospital.

"They (the province) have to pay for a trunk there and we just have to pay for the additional size. That means a real saving for View Royal," Beasley said.

Total cost of the sewer project is estimated to be $5.2 million.

Householders will pay $1.73 for each foot of frontage annually and a user charge of $39.61 — both over a period of 25 years.

This would mean a total charge of $169.36 a year for a house on a 75-foot lot. That will take the collector system to the property line. Householders will pay for their own hook-up and any costs within the property line.

Lamontagne Pours Oil On P.O. Waters

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office "is not having a witch-hunt" against inside postal workers who defied Parliament's back-to-work order, Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne said Wednesday.

Post office supervisors have been advised to play it cool "and nobody will be suspended for minor reasons."

However, criminal charges have been laid against nine executives of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) in connection with the mass defiance of the back-to-work order that took effect Oct. 19.

Lamontagne said the post office hopes to resume normal operations and ease the tensions with rank-and-file members.

Only 25 have been suspended from their jobs "and that was for serious charges such as vandalism and assault."

Among those suspended were two Vancouver inside postal workers.

They were suspended for 15 days for their actions in picketing of the city's main post office during last month's postal strike, a spokesman for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers said Wednesday.

Phyllis Webb, the Vancouver local's secretary treasurer, said a third man will be fired.

Webb said the union will appeal the suspensions and the firing.

Post office spokesman Betty Amos, however, said two workers were suspended for 10 days and the periods have been partially served.

She said no decision has been made in the case of the man the union said would be fired.

Lamontagne said the post office is taking a second look at letters threatening disciplinary action against postal workers and there is a possibility "the letters will be discarded."

"As soon as possible we will try to clear the cloud about that."

Shortly after Lamontagne spoke, union president Jean-Claude Parrot told reporters the government is continuing a campaign of intimidation city directories access to highly confidential personnel files.

Sources say that staff from B.C. Directories were allowed free access to the files for two or three days.

In an interview FitzPatrick admitted that the files were opened but said the B.C. Directories investigators were seeking only phone numbers, addresses and job titles.

The files, however, contain far more information than that, including much of a highly personal and confidential nature.

In his letter Newhouse does not specifically mention the personnel files incident.

He also says there were a number of serious issues related to FitzPatrick's directorship.

Newhouse's report on the personnel department however, did not bring up any such matters.

But it is known Newhouse gave a verbal briefing to Young concerning FitzPatrick's handling of the personnel department.

In his letter Newhouse states: "We immediately made known to the mayor the nature of our findings. The significance and reliability of our findings is supported by the fact that council in conjunction with the city's legal department in light of the evidence presented, took immediate steps to terminate the employment of the personnel director."

Ryan said this morning that he has not yet received a copy of Newhouse's letter and expressed surprise when read portions of it.

Ryan said he did not consider the personnel files incident to be of any major significance. But he added that as secretary of the Victoria Labor Council he would never allow B.C. Directories to have access to personnel files in his office.

Ryan said that he has felt all along that council made a mistake in firing FitzPatrick.

He said his reference at the last council meeting to demolition work done by Newhouse refered to the way in which FitzPatrick's career had been terminated, not to any destruction of the personnel department.

IQ Figures Proved Hoax

NEW YORK (UPI) — British psychologist Cyril Burt already was famous as the founder of educational psychology when he produced "scientific proof" in 1961 that intelligence is the genetic inheritance of the social upper crust. But new studies prove "beyond reasonable doubt" that he made the whole thing up.

Burt's classic paper, Intelligence and Social Mobility, frequently was used by white supremacists as "proof" that whites inherently are more intelligent than blacks, and in public appearances, Burt himself held that Jews and the Irish were less intelligent than the English and that slum children were mentally inferior to children of the upper classes.

He also contended men were smarter than women, but it was his painstakingly prepared set of IQ tables showing common laborers at the bottom end of the spectrum and his assertion that heredity determined their place in that position that won acclaim.

The September issue of Science magazine cites the work of two professors who have been engaged in a study of Burt's controversial findings and concludes that the eminent psychologist fabricated his figures.

Prof. Leon Kamin of Princeton University was one of the first to suspect figures cited in published reports by Burt, who died in 1971 after rising to the heights of his field, becoming the first psychologist ever to be knighted.

According to the magazine, Kamin said in 1976 that Burt's classic paper contained several "extremely improbable statistics."

Further digging by Prov. D.D. Dorfman of the University of Iowa turned up evidence that figures Burt allegedly had obtained from IQ tests actually given were identical with figures published more than 30 years earlier and based on another survey.

Dorfman also proved that Burt obtained the IQ figures he claimed proved the intellectual superiority of upper classes, not through IQ tests, but by selecting evenly distributed points on a bell-shaped curve, which he called "a curve of normal distribution." Row to column tables then were concocted from the figures and passed off as data actually derived from tests.

Science magazine concludes: "These findings show, beyond any reasonable doubt, that Burt fixed the row and column totals of the tables in his highly acclaimed 1961 study."

The magazine noted the irony of the fabrication by Burt who "was a deadly critic of other people's work when this departed in any way from the highest standards of accuracy and logical consistency ... he could tear to ribbons anything shoddy or inconsistent."

HAT CREEK: 'NOBODY HAS VISION'

Meet a Brick Wall Expert

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

AT 71, Cy Jones still hasn't given up. Why should he?

He's got nothing to lose and possibly millions of dollars to gain.

Jones is the White Rock inventor who was the first person to recognize the potential for using Hat Creek coal to filter sewage.

When Jones originally claimed that the 500 million tons of special brown coal at Hat Creek had unique qualities he was scoffed at by B.C. Hydro — the owner of the coal — and by the scientific community.

But that was a decade ago and last year a University of B.C. engineering student earned her PhD by showing that Hat Creek coal can be used to control pollution.

Samia Fadl won her doctorate by showing that when sewage water is passed through beds of the coal both a chemical and biological reaction takes place, drastically reducing the biological and chemical oxygen demand from the sewage as well as filtering almost 100 per cent of many heavy metals from industrial wastes.

She tested the coal in the lab and at the Iona sewage treatment plant — and found that Jones had been right all along.

In the last few years a lot of other people have become interested in the non-burning qualities of the coal. At present the provincial government, through a special commission set up in the department of health, the University of Toronto, B.C. Hydro and a federal government soil researcher in Kamloops are all studying Hat Creek coal.

Cy Jones . . . frustrated, nearly broke

In the meantime Jones is getting older.

He began taking out the first of his 44 patents on the lignite coal more than 10 years ago, but so far hasn't been able to cash in on them.

Jones initially pushed the coal as a valuable way to treat pollution, but in an interview this week he said the coal has as much value — if not more — as a fertilzer.

"The (fertilizer) potential for Hat Creek coal is equal to that of all the resource industries in this province. It could be a $10 billion a year industry," he says.

Jones estimates the market would be in the order of tens of millions of tons yearly — at $100 a ton, minimum.

Who would buy it? Anyone with land that needs enriching, says Jones, and he estimates that in Africa alone the land mass needing treatment is about the size of the entire European continent.

The coal, he said, needs simply to be ground, washed, leeched by water and spread on the soil. It will then greatly increase the humus content by causing an intense proliferation of soil bacteria. (Humus is the organic part of the soil vital to crop production.)

Recently scientists in the Nile Delta have found that by introducing 0.01 per cent of lignite into the top few millimetres of soil, crop yields could be increased at least three times over results obtainable by normal husbandry of the semi-arid soils.

Germany has already started a plant that will produce lignite coal for fertilizer application, and is asking $220 a ton.

But in B.C., says Jones, things are grinding along at a snail's pace.

Dr. Albert Van Ryswyk, a federal department of agriculture researcher (soil) in Kamloops, has just begun a study of Hat Creek coal. He should have his first crops in by mid-summer 1979.

In an interview from his home he said that as yet it's too early to tell anything about the fertilizing ability of the coal. But Van Ryswyk added that scientists in Europe and India have recently proved lignite has value as a fertilizing agent.

"But I don't believe anyone in North America has done so yet," he said.

NO scientists, perhaps, but Cy Jones claims he has. He became so convinced of its potential that he applied for patents and in 1963 put 50-pound bags of it on the market under the name Terra-Sol.

But 15 years ago there was no market for a coal fertilizer.

"The market is there now and nobody other than Germany is supplying it. And Germany's prices are too high to be competitive with us.

"All that's lacking is for someone from B.C. to go and sell it to the Arabian countries. If I had the authority I'd be over there selling it to the Arabs right now."

But Jones can't sell what he doesn't own. He has tried and failed in numerous attempts to get a contract with Hydro to mine the Hat Creek deposit.

"If I had a million-dollar corporation behind me it would be different.

"But I can't do anything until Hydro gets off its butt.

"It hurts me to see this opportunity slipping away. We have the raw material and the market is there . . . but nobody seems to have the vision to do it. I don't know why an old goat like me has to come up with it."

Jones says he's frustrated and nearly broke because of his years of attempts to get the provincial government to exploit Hat Creek coal as a pollution control material and now as a fertilizer.

He tried to convince the old Socred regime, he tried with the NDP and he's been trying with the present government — and he's bumped into many a brick wall.

But Jones says he hasn't quit yet. He's got a vision.

"I'm no further ahead than I was 10 years ago," he says, "but I'm not giving up. I'm 71 and I'm not going to make very much money out of this. I'd just like, before I pop off, to get this thing going."

Could millions be poured into B.C.?

Special Committee Proposed on Grants

The present system of distributing municipal funds to the cultural community is inadequate and should be replaced by a Greater Victoria special select committee with a minimum of $200,000 at its disposal annually.

That recommendation will be made to councils for the four core municipalities following a meeting of the Greater Victoria Cultural Committee on Wednesday.

The committee has compiled a brief which states that under the present system of grant disbursement, municipal funds have often been given to groups that lack accountability and have poor management practices.

"On the other hand, successful well-managed organizations have rarely received encouragement by way of increased cultural grants," the report says.

No examples are cited.

The brief also states that because grants are made on a year-to-year basis cultural organizations cannot plan ahead.

"This system is not conducive to long-term planning and therefore perpetuates the "crisis" style of management. Often the granting authority is placed in the unenviable position of having to make a decision to pick up part of the organization's deficit in order to avoid a severe financial crisis or even bankruptcy."

The report says the proposed special committee could set up a system of examination to weed out unworthy recipients and encourage stability in the cultural community by making grants for programs covering two or three years.

In addition to recommending that the special committee get $200,000 annually, the report says a guaranteed trust fund or a long-term granting base should also be established. The size of the suggested trust fund would be up to the discretion of the four core municipalities.

The report also recommends that a maximum of $5,000 per year be granted directly to the Community Arts Council of Greater Victoria for disbursement to individual local artists and small cultural organizations.

The report adds that the special committee considered a proposal that a special fund of $40,000 a year be established from the Royal Theatre's annual surplus to underwrite occasional presentations which would otherwise not come to Victoria for economic reasons.

Limited seating at the Royal Theatre means that some of the more expensive shows simply cannot be produced here.

The report says that if $40,000 were available to underwrite such presentations it could have a substantial and beneficial impact on cultural health in this area.

The report will be forwarded to the councils of Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

Cultural organizations in the Greater Victoria region get local grants from the intermunicipal committee, the Capital Regional District Board and the individual municipalities.

Non-cultural groups apply to the same sources for funds.

Musicians To Play Free

The proposal by leading members of Victoria Symphony Orchestra to play free in concerts designed to help the society's precarious financial situation has been welcomed by the new executive.

As a result the society is sponsoring something new: the Victoria Symphony Chamber Players.

The group will present the first of a series of nine Saturday concerts at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria Saturday at 2:30 p.m.

The concerts will be held on Saturdays with the next one set for Nov. 25.

All will be held at the Moss Street gallery except the pre-Christmas one which will probably take place at the McPherson Playhouse Dec. 16.

Ammo Quality Questioned After Saanich Shoot-Out

A police shoot-out in Saanich Wednesday has raised questions about the adequacy of the ammunition authorized for use by police in B.C.

Chief Bob Peterson declined to comment until an investigation is completed but indicated preliminary findings may result in a report to the B.C. Police Commission which sets the police ammunition standards.

Police are concerned that a 33-year-old man was still able to resist arrest even though he had been shot three times by an officer.

The incident occurred at Cedar Hill Crossroad and McKenzie as Cpl. William Hillcoat was investigating a single-car accident and reported armed robbery.

Hillcoat received a blast from a sawed-off shotgun as he approached the car and fired five times at his assailant, later identified as Tommy Young Lackey, a 33-year-old escaper from Matsqui Prison.

Officers arriving minutes later had to forcibly restrain Lackey. There were reports the fugitive was attempting to reload his shotgun. A box of No. 6 bird shot was found in the trunk of the car.

A police spokesman said Lackey broke his right leg and lost his left eye in the shoot-out, but is otherwise in good condition in Victoria General Hospital.

Meanwhile Hillcoat, who was struck by 38 pellets, has been ordered off duty by his doctor for the next couple of weeks.

Flats Basin May Harm Park Plan

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The illegal installation of a concrete basin at Panama Flats by the sons of Saanich Ald. Geoff Vantreight could cause serious problems to a proposed linear park along Colquitz Creek, a spokesman for the Saanich engineering department said today.

The installation is in the middle of municipally-owned property along the creek. The tract has been proposed as a linear park, the spokesman said.

Saanich this week applied to the municipal affairs ministry for funds to undertake a study on the feasibilty of establishing the park along the banks of the creek.

The Saanich official said the Vantreights' extensive drainage program for the flats is also of concern to environmentalists because over a period of years it could result in a shrinkage of the soil and a drop in the level of the flood plain.

He said the soil in the flats is called peat muck and acts like a sponge, absorbing water in winter and remaining moist in summer.

"But if you continually drain the soil, the muck gets drier and drier and eventually collapses," he said.

"The level of the flats would drop and would result in more extensive pumping of surplus water into Colquitz creek."

He said this in turn would probably result in increasing the flow of sedimentation in the creek.

Dr. Robert Langford, environmental consultant for Saanich, agreed this is a possibility and one of the chief concerns arising from construction of any extensive drainage system on the flats.

A federal fisheries officer said his department has been informed of the danger of the level of the flats dropping lower.

"But our main concern is fish and not soil," he said. "If it (the drainage project) increases sedimentation in the creek, then we would take action."

Vantreight Faces Charge

Ald. Geoffrey Vantreight of Saanich has been charged under the federal Plant Quarantine Act.

It is alleged that Vantreight conveyed "within Canada, plant or other matter that was likely to be infested with a pest, to wit, potato cyst nematode."

The act was alleged to have taken place Sept. 29 at or near Mill Bay.

Defence lawyer Warren Fensom elected trial by judge and jury and asked that the matter be remanded until Dec. 5 to fix a date for preliminary hearing.

Outside the courtroom, Fensom said he had no idea of what amount of infested goods was alleged to have been transported by Vantreight and said he would have to contact the prosecution side to get further details.

The case was brought to court two days earlier than scheduled, possibly because Vantreight had scheduled his vacation earlier and wanted to get away Wednesday morning.

Vantreight became the centre of a controversy earlier this week when he admitted to fellow Saanich council members that his sons broke a municipal bylaw by digging drainage ditches and building a drainage basin on Saanich-owned land on Panama Flats. The alderman is chairman of council's bylaw enforcement committee.

Meeting Cut By One Day

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Thoroughbred racing will end at Sandown Park on Monday, one day earlier than scheduled, in order that quality cards may be presented on the final two days of what now is a 16-day meeting.

"Some of the horses are in a badly "run-down" condition, racing director Aubrey Davies explained. "They appear to have been going through the top cushion on the track and burning their heels on the limestone which remained on the track following the running of the standardbreds here this summer."

Davies earlier had revealed that it was getting more difficult day by day to produce a good card. It is estimated that about 262 horses have started at least once at Sandown this fall. But 30 have run only once and about the same number only twice.

Capital City Turf Club president George Harknett said "we had fully intended to complete the meeting, but when there were some doubts as to what kind of a card we could present on the final day, we decided that the best thing to do would be to assure the fans of quality cards on the weekend and forego the final day."

This does not mean the end of thoroughbred racing here, Harknett was quick to point out. "We have every intention of carrying on next fall, but there will have to be some changes, we will have a bigger take of the mutuel play, and we will just have to sit down and analyze the entire situation."

Harknett suggested that overexposure to racing this year had much to do with the downplay at the mutuels. "This is the 70th day of racing," he said; (the standardbreds ran for 57 days this summer) "and that may be too much for this area."

Wednesday was a good example of the decline in the mutuel play. The handle was $124,232, second lowest of the four Wednesdays. The daily average now is $153,535 while the daily average for the 1977 meet was $195,361 and the all-time high was in 1976 when it was $214,775.

As it stands, there will be racing Friday at 1 p.m. and Saturday and Monday starting at 12:30 p.m.

Otherwise, on a track which was in surprisingly good condition following the downpour on Tuesday, it was a day of surprises as the favorites mostly finished up the track.

There was also a spectacular spill, in which neither horse nor jockey were injured, and what is undoubtedly a first, a third victory by woman Jockey Pat Owen.

Double figures started appearing on the mutuel board in the first race when Proliner, ridden by Ray Creighton, made every post a winner for a $16.90 payoff. Lynda's Pride, with Bobby Stein in the irons, returned $16.60 in the third. Fleet Navaho, one of the most improved horses on the grounds, won the fifth, with Creighton riding, to pay $14.70 and Chery's Capri topped them all in the feature under jockey Meno Mena to return $20.10.

The chestnut filly Wily's Tam made it three victories in a row, the first at Exhibition Park, by coming from off the pace to edge the favored Remi Tike in the sixth and return $9.50.

TRAVIS WILKINSON
. . . shares jockey lead

The spill occurred in the eighth race when the four-year old filly Proserpine suddenly went down in the stretch throwing jockey Gary Demorest over her head. Both got up and walked away and later were reported uninjured.

Owen got her third win of the meeting on Tuff To Bluff ($9.50) in the third.

Saturday's running of the the $4,000 added Vancouver Island championship over a mile and 1/16 may have a field of 10.

Weights assigned Wednesday were Lyric Line 116, Teddy Bear D 116, Paca 116, Reformed 114, Fleet Avalanza 114, Saucy Verdict 126, Forty Jewels 113, Blue Major 110, Polatouche 110, Kimbob 118.

Cats Asking Questions About Hawks' Turnbull

Now you can think it. Maybe it was a mistake to let Perry Turnbull go.

Turnbull is one of several players who hung his hat briefly in Victoria as a member of the Western Hockey League Cougars. He came as a raw, 16-year-old forward but was soon dealt to Calgary. He played in Billings last season and will wind up his junior eligibility, barring another move, as a member of the Portland Winter Hawks.

Jack Shupe wasn't around as coach when Turnbull tried out in Victoria (Pat Ginnell was in charge then), but he's asking "how come?" after Wednesday's game in Portland.

Turnbull rifled in five goals as the Hawks came up with a 7-6 victory to end a five-game Victoria undefeated streak. The 19-year-old's spree boosted his season's total to 18, and Turnbull has managed eight of those in four games against the Cougars.

He scored three in the second period and twice in the third to nullify a quick start by the Cougars. Skating on even terms with the Hawks most of the way, Victoria led 2-0 before Turnbull snapped a 26-minute Portland scoreless streak.

Each team counted two power-play goals in the hard-checking but comparatively tame (penalty-wise) game. Portland drew eight minors, the Cougars six.

Mike Toal, another one-time Cougar, figured prominently in Turnbull's spree by drawing five assists. Dave Babych and Joel Elliott were Portland's other scorers.

Bob Smith, with two, Greg Adams, Sid Giroux, Gary Lupul and Torrie Robertson scored for the Cougars, still holding first place in the Western Division and scheduled to face New Westminster Bruins at Memorial Arena on Saturday.

Steve Amiss, who ran his scoreless streak to four periods after Tuesday's 9-0 shutout over Medicine Hat Tigers, faced 43 shots and played a strong game.

Portland netminder Bart Hunter stopped 34 but one late in the third period incensed Shupe. Cougars' George Fritz was confronted with an open net with Hunter down and out of the play but the Portland netminder somehow got a stick on the puck.

An irate Shupe feels he knows how Hunter prevented the potential tying goal.

"He threw his stick at the puck," declared Shupe. "That should have been a goal but the referee wouldn't call it."

In Wednesday's only other game, Medicine Hat finally broke a three-game scoring famine but still couldn't find success. Blanked in their previous three starts, the Tigers dropped a 6-4 decision to the Bruins in New Westminster.

'Brake' Drug For Gymnasts

PARIS (AP) — Western officials say women gymnasts from the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe may be using a new "brake" drug to keep them in top form by delaying puberty.

Dr. Robert Klein of France, chief medical examiner at the recent world gymnastics championships, says he suspects that some Communist-bloc trainers have used a drug he could not identify that apparently acts on the pituitary gland, slowing development.

Smaller, lighter female gymnasts outperform their seniors of equal ability because of the high strength-to-weight ratio needed in the sport, doctors say.

The difference was clear at the Strasbourg, France, world championships when Romanian star Nadia Comaneci, who swept the Montreal Olympics two years ago as an elfin 14-year-old, was consistently outclassed. At 16, she has a woman's figure and carries 20 extra pounds.

Klein said he had seen photos of a leading Soviet Union gymnast showing a steady regression of breast development during a four-year period.

The president of the Danish Gymnastics Federation, Niels Peter Nielson, said: "I do not like the way we are going. We see small girls who I suspect are being controlled by drugs . . . they are being stopped from becoming women."

A British expert who asked not to be named said the available physical evidence suggests the use of such a drug "is entirely possible." But, he added, it could hardly be proved without sophisticated drug tests and the willing co-operation of the athletes concerned.

Prior to the Strasbourg meet, Klein said, officials from an unnamed Communist country sought assurances that there would be no doping tests before signing in their team members. There were no tests.

"I am afraid this throws wide open the door of doubt," said Klein. "Those who have nothing to hide would be willing to submit to anti-doping tests," he said.

He said full dope test facilities were available in Strasbourg, but International Gymnastics Federation president Yuri Titov, a former Soviet Union gymnast, did not request them.

A Night for The Goalies; Canucks Clip Red Wings

Times News Services

Goaltender Greg Millen, who has played in two National Hockey League games, and goaltender Gilles Meloche, who has played in a lot of NHL games he would prefer to forget, both had a night to remember Wednesday.

Millen, a Toronto-born rookie from Kalamazoo of the International League, kicked out 32 shots for Pittsburgh and would have had a shutout if the Penguins had not abandoned their defensive chores in the later stages of a 6-3 victory over Colorado Rockies.

And Meloche, a battle-scarred veteran of seven seasons with some of the worst teams in NHL history, was the biggest single factor in Minnesota North Stars' 5-3 victory over New York Rangers, who had been unbeaten in seven previous games.

In other games, Vancouver Canucks outscored Detroit Red Wings 6-4, Montreal Canadiens crushed Washington Capitals 6-0, Chicago Black Hawks edged Toronto Maple Leafs 2-1, and Philadelphia Flyers defeated Los Angeles Kings 5-3.

Loose defensive play by the Red Wings and two-goal performances by rookie Tom Gradin and Dennis Ververgaert enabled the Canucks to snap a three-game losing strea.

Detroit coach Bobby Kromm, whose team has lost three of its last four, was particularly frustrated by the Wings' inability to score when they had a manpower advantage for more than six minutes in the second period as the Canucks drew four successive penalties and were two men short for a time.

At Pittsburgh, the Penguins solicitously protected their 21-year-old goaltender for two periods as they built up a 4-0 lead against Colorado. But when Dave Schultz made it 5-0 early in the third, they left him virtually on his own for the rest of the evening.

Meloche can recall many similar experiences in his years with the defunct Cleveland Barons and California Golden Seals, particularly a night at Madison Square Garden seven years ago when the Rangers beat California 12-1.

The 28-year-old netminder, acquired by Minnesota last summer when Cleveland merged with the North Stars, was sharp Wednesday night, making several spectacular stops as he blanked the Rangers for two periods.

It was no night for underdogs at Landover, Md., where Montreal goaltender Ken Dryden recorded his eighth career shutout over the Capitals and his teammates held Washington to two shots on goal in the first period and 20 over-all.

Guy Lafleur, last year's NHL scoring champion, picked up a goal and two assists, giving him nine points in his last seven games and 18 for the season.

RAMBLER TOURNEY SET

Mt. Douglas Ramblers girls basketball team will host its sixth annual invitational tournament featuring several of the top teams in the province the weekend of Dec. 8-9.

Competing will be: Salmon Arm, winner of the B.C. championship the last three years; New Westminster, fifth-place finisher in last year's championship; Chilliwack, ninth in the B.C. tournament last year; Centennial of Coquitlam, 10th in B.C. last season; Reynolds, third in B.C. last year; Parklands, winner of the Ramblers' tournament last year; Spectrum, expected to have a contending club this year, and the host Ramblers, third on the Island last season and improved this year.

As the B.C. championships will be co-hosted by Mt. Doug and the University of Victoria, March 7-11, the tournament will give local schools a taste of what to expect.

Games Friday are at 4, 5:30, 7 and 8:30 p.m. On Saturday the first game is at 8 a.m. with the championship final at 8 p.m.

Stingers Trip Panthers To Reach Soccer Final

Stelly's Stingers advanced to the second division playoff final for the Soccer Shield by bouncing Parkland Panthers 4-1 in a Greater Victoria High School Soccer League semi-final match Wednesday.

Stingers will face Belmont Braves in the final at 6 p.m. Friday at Royal Athletic Park before Mt. Douglas Thistles and Victoria Tyees square off for the first-division Colonist Cup at 8.

Stelly's, a new entry this season, had come up with a potent scoring attack in recent games.

One reason appears to be Virgil Sampson, who scored three times against Panthers to boost his record to nine goals in the past three matches.

Sampson scored twice and Russ Windsor counted once to give Stingers, who had a 2-10-1 record in the regular season, to a 3-0 lead at the half.

Nicklaus Mishap Never Happened

Times News Services

Reports that golfing great Jack Nicklaus and Australian newspaper magnate Kerry Packer were aboard a luxury yacht that ran aground during a storm were erroneous, Packer's secretary said today in Sydney, Australia.

The secretary, Pat Wheatley, said Packer was ashore in Cairns, a town in northern Queenland state, 1,700 miles north of Sydney, waiting for Nicklaus to arrive at the time of the incident.

Police reports had said Packer and Nicklaus were aboard the $1.4 million yacht Melita when it went aground during a violent storm in the Great Barrier Reef during a marlin fishing expedition.

UBC Provides First Test

University of Victoria's defending champion basketball teams get down to the real thing starting this weekend when they open their Canada West University Athletic Association schedules against University of British Columbia Thunderbirds and Thunderettes at McKinnon gym.

Vikettes, fresh from winning the Calgary women's invitational tournament last weekend, play host the UBC Friday and Saturday in a pair of 6:45 p.m. encounters. The Vikings, winners of two of three exhibition games in Winnipeg last weekend, follow against the T-Birds at 8:30.

Coach Ken Shields' Vikings, who ran away from the rest of the Canada West field last season by winning 18 of 20, face a UBC team that has lost a couple of its taller stars but boasts speed and agility.

Gone are six-foot-eight forward Mark Adilman and six-foot-seven centre Adam Yawrenko but coach Peter Mullin has a couple of exceptional newcomers in guard Ian McKinnon, whom Shields tabs as a potential Canada West superstar, and centre Bob Forsyth.

All Vikings are healthy and Shields plans to start Chris Hebb, Gerald Kazanowski and Rene Dolcetti up front with Robbie Parris and Ian Hyde-Lay at guard.

Vikettes, who have won 60 consecutive league games over three seasons, are favored to run their string to 62 over the Gaye Coburn-coached Thunderettes, who finished in last place last season and have had a major turnover of players again this year. The only injury problem UVic coach Kathy Shields faces is an ankle injury to Brenda Smith, who's expected to be ready to play by the weekend.

Jobson Ignites Esquimalt Attack

Esquimalt Maple Leafs outshot Victoria Athletics 53-29 en route to a 13-0 shutout victory in South Island Big Six Intermediate Hockey League action Wednesday at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Bill Jobson set the pace for Leafs with four goals. Double scorers were Les Bergman, Gerry Blanchette and Bob Martin while singles were contributed by Chris Riddell, Rob Coldwell and Rugs Pritchard.

Claremont Grabs Cross-Country Title

Claremont captured the both team titles in the Vancouver Island high school cross-country championships Wednesday.

In the boys' competition, Claremont won handily by accumulating 25 points under the reverse-scoring system.

Mt. Douglas was second with 87 and was followed by Victoria High (90) and Belmont (117).

Tony Theriault of Claremont recorded a time of 22 minutes, three seconds while winning the 7,000-metre boys' race. Terry Bateman of Mt. Douglas was second and Tony Stark of Claremont third.

Claremont also took the girls' team title with 54 points and was followed by Victoria (61), Belmont (66) and Dunsmuir (127).

Maeve Lydon of Claremont finished first in the 3,700-metre race with a 13:30 clocking. Bonnie Hutton of Spectrum was second and Karen Coutts of Belmont third.

The top four teams in each bracket advance to the British Columbia finals Nov. 18 at the University of Victoria.

Qualifying for the provincials as individuals were Eddie Smythe of Dunsmuir, Phil Rowe of Esquimalt, Holly Ruddick of Nanaimo and Heather McDonald of St. Michael's University School.

Only two of the 12 schools entered — Nanaimo and Cowichan — were from up-Island.

Gordon Head Tops Elementary Ranks

Gordon Head captured the Victoria and District elementary school cross-country championship earlier this week with 352 points on the reverse-scoring system.

Braefoot was second out of 19 schools with 486 and Doncaster placed third with 555.

Uplands Pairing Wins

Norman Wallace and John Pierpoint of Uplands took the seniors golf buttons from Joe Cardy and Fred Craig by defeating the Royal Colwood duo on the 16th hole Wednesday at Cedar Hill Golf Club.

Rejected Tigers Planning Appeal

max low

It's thumbs down on the Tigers and boy, are they roaring about it.

The application by the East Indian-member club to join the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association was officially rejected (again) following a general meeting Monday night.

After dropping out of the league two seasons ago (because the big Rebels club wouldn't play them) and being refused re-entry last season, the Tigers' application to get back in was turned down at the start of this season.

Their play was too rough, they were told, yet the league officials gave the East Indians a chance to show they could behave in a series of exhibition games.

Five judges watched these games and reported to Monday's meeting that they were satisfied with the Tigers' conduct. Tigers were led to believe that if they performed cleanly in the exhibitions they would be allowed to play in the league for the second-half season which gets under way Nov.20.

But, when it was put to the vote, members of the other clubs — Rebels have three teams in the one-division league and the rest are UVic Vikings, Castaways, Oak Bay and Market Square — the result was a tie. When it was put to the vote a second time, Tigers' application was rejected by two votes.

VIMFHA president Craig Wilson of Rebels said he was surprised.

"From the people who talked at the meeting, I thought the vote would go the other way," he said. "But there must have been a lot of silent voters who feel deeply about this.

"It's up to us to try to keep negotiations going with the Tigers so we can try to get them in the league for next season."

The Tigers were surprised at the vote, Wilson said, "and very upset."

You bet they were!

"Everybody was figuring we'd be in the league," Tigers club president Subhash Sharma told me. "Castaways and Marketmen were there giving us their open support but it's just that Rebels have three teams in the league and they dominate things.

"Five judges watched our five games and they were satisfied with our play and conduct," Subhash pointed out. "The five all recommended the Tigers be in the league. And all this happened before the voting."

Craig Wilson, who has often complained before of dangerous use of the stick by the East Indians, said this decision doesn't stop the Tigers (the players) from playing field hockey. It just keeps the Tigers club out.

"Any of them can play for any of the other clubs," he said.

Even I find that a little daft. Is it conceivable that these are nice fellows by themselves who turn into monsters the moment they're all together? And anyway, can other teams legally band together like this and keep a club from entering an amateur sports league?

"It's ridiculous," said Subhash. "If we can play for different clubs, why can't we play together? If we're not mean or rough as individuals, why should we be as a team? No, it's just that we're too strong when we play together!

"Isn't there someone out there who can help us?"

The Tigers are not through. They plan to appeal to anyone who'll listen. Anyone in Canada. Letters urging intervention will go out to the Victoria City Council and the ministries of recreation and conservation at both the provincial and federal levels.

THIRD WTT TEAM FOLDS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Strings, 1978 World Team Tennis champions, are folding, team owner Jerry Buss has announced.

Owners of the New York and Boston franchises had already called it quits and the loss of the Strings leaves the future of the whole league, now in doubt.

Los Angeles had attracted crowds averaging 7,219 last season, a WTT record, and had sold 1,500 season tickets for the 1979 season, ahead of last year's pace.

Reg. $185
It's not hard making a leather coat that can sell for $149. But then again, who wants just another leather coat. Ours has the combination of fine quality, superb workmanship and appealing design. That's what makes it so special. And a bargain at $149. Classic styling, with trench coat influence. The supreme compliment to any gentleman's wardrobe. 3 x 3 double-breasted front has large notch lapels. Added front and back yoke details. Detachable 3-piece belt. Sleeve tabs and slash pockets. Practical 3 season, zip-out, quilted acrylic lining. And the leather . . . crushably soft Cabretta quality. Very touchable. In Black, Burgundy, Dk. Brown. Sizes 36 to 46. 45R 003 081 B.

Suspect Said He Went 'Bananas' - Mountie

An undercover policeman told a B.C. Supreme Court jury Wednesday a man accused of manslaughter told him in a Colwood jail cell he had "gone bananas" in a fight with a good friend.

Pleading self-defence in the death of a North Saanich man last February, the defence later closed its case in the trial of David Arthur Cathers, 20.

Mr. Justice Jack Ruttan was to charge the jury today for a verdict based on two days of evidence arising from the death of Gerhardt Malcolm Kirmhse, 20, last Feb. 15 after a fight with Cathers at 11091 West Saanich.

The Crown alleges counts of manslaughter and of wounding with intent, and prosecutor J.W. Anderson said the evidence showed Cathers used excessive force in his struggle with Kirmhse.

Cause of death was attributed to swelling of the brain caused by a blow or blows to the skull. Anderson suggested a total of 20 blows had been struck, implying that the accused was aware of the force he was using.

The court heard evidence from RCMP Constable Leonard Pizzacalla, who said he entered cells at Colwood in an undercover capacity four days after the death and shortly before Cathers was place in the lockup. Cathers was then charged with second degree murder.

He quoted Cathers as saying he had "gone bananas" in a fight with Kirmhse, who he described as a good friend.

"I asked him what (Kirmhse) had died from," Pizzacalla said, "He said he didn't know, but he may have beat the back of his head in, maybe broke his neck — it was hard to say — maybe both. He said he had called an ambulance."

Later, after Cathers had appeared in court on his arraignment, the policeman suggested that he might be taking the rap for someone else, since Cathers did not appear to be someone capable of murder.

"I kind of went nuts on the guy," Cathers replied. "I didn't mean to kill him."

Both had been in a bad mood that morning as the two sat smoking, drinking tea and listening to records, Cathers told his cellmate.

"He just got surly with me," the officer quoted Cathers as saying.

Kirmhse had said something derogatory about Cathers' girl, Andrea Grownow, at whose parents' home he was holidaying.

When Cathers told Kirmhse to get out, the accused said, "he kicked me in the balls and I fell downstairs," the policeman related. The two men struggled down a second flight of stairs into the basement, then into the driveway outside before Kirmhse subsided, Pizzacalla recounted.

"I just went nuts, crazy nuts. It's pretty easy to do I guess," Cathers was quoted.

Later, returning to the cells after seeing the girl, he cried and said, "I'd do it again if it weren't for her . . . go for that bastard," Cathers told Pizzacalla. "Is that what it was over?" the policeman asked.

"No, not really," the other replied.

Under cross-examination by defence counsel William Deverell, the witness said Cathers told him he began fighting to defend himself after Kirmhse kicked him.

Kirmhse was described by Cathers as an aggressive person, sometimes mouthy, had been in fights and disliked police. He was aggressive toward Cathers that morning and asked if Cathers was having a good time "sitting on your ass while the women are working?

"I told him to f--- off. I was upset. I didn't see any reason for that sort of attack on me and Andrea. I went to the head of the stairs and told him to f--- off.

"He stood up and walked towards me, called me an asshole and kicked me in the testicles.

"I doubled up and fell downstairs and he came after after me . . . I was scared he was going to kick me again . . . I grabbed his legs and the two of us fell. He landed heavily, head-first," Cathers said.

Kirmhse struck his head with a thud on the bottom step or the concrete floor, the accused said, but he continued to punch and kick at Cathers.

The accused said he recalled having Kirmhse by the hair or neck, banging his head against the back door knob, trying to "slow him down" or stop the fight.

"Did you intend to cause his death?" Deverell asked.

"No."

"To cause him serious bodily harm?"

"No. I just wanted to stun him or stop the fight," Cathers added.

At one point he shook Kirmhse off and managed to reach the first stair landing before being caught, he said. The wrestling went on, both men on their knees by the door, then through the door and rolling off the front porch. Then Kirmhse stopped fighting.

"He was holding his head. I realized he was seriously hurt. There was blood all over the place . . . he was obviously in pain . . . breathing hoarse. I went and called the operator to get an ambulance."

Cathers admitted he lied to police at first by telling them Kirmhse had been struck by a car because he feared an assault charge and did not want to have to tell Andrea they had fought.

Truck Fears 'Unfounded'

Hulford Street residents' fears that their small cul-de-sac will be pounded by heavy semi-trailer trucks from the new Goodwill Bottling plant are unfounded, Saanich public works committee was told Tuesday night.

Municipal engineer Clifford Warren said in a report to the committee that the plant now under construction on the old Ste. Michelle winery property will be allowed Hulford as an exit only for six smaller route trucks per day.

The only other traffic using Hulford will be employees' vehicles and service vehicles entering the plant, Warren said.

Quadra would be the main access for transport and route trucks, and also for employee parking.

The engineer said the building's owner has agreed to supplement the landscaping plans already approved and to provide additional boulevard trees in order to soften the building's impact on the residential street.

Increase Shown In Jobless Rate

The Victoria unemployment rate stood at 8.6 per cent in October, up from 8.1 in September and sharply higher than the 7.2 per cent in the same month last year, the local Canada Employment Centre reported Wednesday.

A CEC spokesman said the higher rate was due to an increase of secondary workers, such as housewives, being attracted into the work force by improving economic conditions.

When jobs are plentiful the unemployment rate sometimes increases because more people are seeking work, he said.

For example, from April to October the job growth rate for the Victoria area was 9.7 per cent, compared with a B.C. average of only 4.4 per cent.

Try Kiwi Sauce On Those Fillets!

Fish is appearing on the family menu now more than ever. The reasons are varied: fish is nutritious and low in waste, and it represents a change of pace.

No matter how tasty the fish, in many instances it seems that it's only as good as its garnish. That being the case, you're certain to fall in love with Fillets with Kiwi Sauce.

Picture fillet of sole or flounder (or a similar light table fish) simmered in white wine, then topped by a light, colorful kiwifruit sauce that provides the perfect flavor-catalyst.

If fish is not your thing, you may substitute skinned and deboned chicken breasts in its stead. Either way, the kiwi sauce works its special magic in a similar fashion.

Magic is a good description for the kiwifruit, that small, suede-like ugly duckling of a delicacy. For inside that fuzzy brown exterior lurks the most brilliant green flesh with a truly striking flavor.

So, the next time you plan on fish or chicken, why not highlight it with Kiwi Sauce and make your entree every bit as "good as its garnish".

FILLETS WITH KIWI SAUCE

2 skinless sole or flounder fillets
Salt and pepper
¾ cup dry white wine (or ¾ cup water with 1 tablespoon lemon juice)
Kiwifruit sauce (recipe below)
2 slices lemon

Season fillets with salt and pepper. Roll up fillets and secure with toothpicks and place in saucepan. Pour in wine or liquid; bring to a light boil; cover pan; simmer for 5-8 minutes until fish is cooked. (Fish is done when a fork pierces the flesh easily.) Remove from water with slotted spoon. If desired, chill for 3-4 hours.

KIWIFRUIT SAUCE

2 ripe kiwifruit, peeled and sliced
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 teaspoons salad oil
½ teaspoon dijon mustard

Exotic Passion Fruit Not An Aphrodisiac

craig claiborne

Q. What is passion fruit? Does the name imply that it is an aphrodisiac?

A. Passion fruit, more correctly called the purple granadilla, is an egg-shaped fruit with a sweet and, to some palates, a mildly exotic flavor. Granadillas are cultivated extensively in South America and it is said that commercial production in California is increasing.

Cut open, passion fruit can be eaten as a delectable fruit. One of the best souffles I have ever eaten was made with passion fruit, prepared and served at the Restaurant Girardet in Crissier, Switzerland, an establishment that many count as among the finest in the world.

The name apparently does not imply that the fruit is an aphrodisiac. In the volume Fresh Food — edited by Sylvia Rosenthal (Tree Communications, 1978), the editor offers "the theory . . . that the name came from the early Christian missionaries to South America. At first sight, the parts of the flowers on the plant that bears the fruits were fancifully thought to resemble the instruments of the Crucifixion, the crown of thorns and nails, or to suggest the circumstances surrounding it."

Q. Is there any logical explanation for the name marshmallow?

A. Yes. There is a plant grown in Europe and — according to some sources — along the bogs and marshes of North America. It has a mucilaginous root once widely used in the preparation of candies and other confections. In its earliest forms, marshmallows were a kind of paste-like sweet and they were made from the root. Commercially prepared marshmallows today are generally made from corn syrup, sugar, gelatin and starches. The outer coating is powdered sugar.

Q. Is it true that confectioners' sugar, otherwise known as powdered sugar, is made with cornstarch?

A. As far as can be determined, commercially prepared confectioners' sugar invariably contains a small amount of cornstarch. One of the best known brands, now sitting on my pantry shelf, states that the proportions are 97 per cent finely ground or powdered sugar and 3 per cent cornstarch. The cornstarch, the label explains, is added to prevent caking.

Q. What is shaddock?

A. It is a member of the grapefruit family. According to some sources, the name derives from one Captain Shaddock, believed to have been British, who introduced this version of grapefruit into Barbados. He brought the seeds on his boat from the East Indies. The vast majority of the grapefruit consumed today are smaller than the shaddock which is said to be the largest member of the citrus family. Modern grapefruit also is less coarse in texture and is possessed of far fewer seeds.

Don't count on a boxed pancake, biscuit or corn muffin mix in an emergency if the box has been sitting in the cupboard for many months. Open the box and you're likely to find a lumpy, webby mess left by dead insects. If you need to store such mixes for long periods, freeze them to keep out bugs.

GIFTS AN INCENTIVE IN CALGARY DIET PLAN

CALGARY (CP) — A former Montreal psychologist now practising here is helping overweight women lose pounds through a combination of rewards, behavioral modification and counselling.

Dr. Marc Wolf runs a class of 12 women aged 20 to 40 who are overweight by 30 to 200 pounds.

"The women meet me for an hour and a half one evening a week," says Dr. Wolf. "I schedule the get-together for the first of the week to help reduce the temptation for them to cheat on their diet over the weekend."

He says that he keeps the group small so members can relate to each other. He also employs a buddy system.

"They have to keep in touch with at least one other member during the week. But the fact that they're all dieting is a group secret. No names may be revealed to outsiders."

Dr. Wolf says that he establishes a goal weight for each.

"When they reach this or have lost weight consistently for three consecutive weeks, I reward them with a little gift."

The monetary value of the gift is unimportant, he says. What is vital is that it's a tangible reminder that it was earned the hard way.

For the first month of classes, each woman brings a list of what she eats or drinks, right down to a glass of water.

The diet they are given provides options so they don't feel totally deprived or rigidly regulated.

They also take food supplements.

When the reducer has reached her goal weight, she returns to the class only once a month, so Dr. Wolf can see how her behavior patterns have changed.

Cutting Laurels To City Woman

Betty Balmer of Victoria has won the Vancouver Island haircutting trophy in a competition sponsored by the Island branch of the Hairdressers Association of British Columbia.

The event, at Laurel Point Inn, drew 200 members from the Island and Lower Mainland.

Leonard McAlpine placed second in the competition while Tony Sayers was third. Honorable mentions went to Joseph Sayers and Wayne Jackson.

In addition to the competition, there was a five-hour display of hairstyling by Martha Loubin Bryce and Gerry du Montier, two members of the Canadian team who placed ninth in the world competition in Germany last month.

Guest speaker at the meeting was Mel Cooper, executive vice-president of Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Trophies were present to competition winners at a wine and cheese party that followed the meeting.

The event was organized by Ann Harrison of Vancouver, provincial executive member in charge of Vancouver Island events. She was assisted by a 10-member Victoria committee.

Check Sugar Before Serving Cereal Snacks

QUESTION: I let my youngsters snack on dry cereal since I feel it is better than candy. Is this a good idea?

ANSWER: Unsweetened cereal is an acceptable snack food. However, many of the dry cereals contain a great deal of sugar which encourages dental decay and poor eating habits. The Health Protection Branch of Canada surveyed the sugar content of 74 breakfast cereals. Some contain more sugar than any other ingredient.

The cereals that contain 40 to 50 per cent sugar by weight were Boo Berry, Sugar Pops, Count Chocula, Apple Jacks and Frankenberry.

The next highest group containing between 30 and 40 per cent sugar by weight and were Sugar Crisp, Trix, Frosted Flakes, Captain Crunch, Coca Puffs, Lucky Charms and Fruit Loops.

The next group contained 20 to 30 per cent sugar by weight and included Alpha-Bits, Honeycomb and Harvest Crunch with raisins and dates.

If your children like dry cereals for a snack, the non-sugar-coated ones can be offered occasionally.

QUESTION: I take bran every day to increase my intake of fibre. Is there a danger of taking too much?

ANSWER: As with most nutrients, excessive use can have possible harmful effects. Extremely large amounts of bran may interfere with the absorption of certain nutrients.

It is best to keep moderation in mind. Increase your intake of high-fibre foods such as whole grain breads and cereals, fruits, vegetables, and dried peas and beans. If you still want to supplement your diet, eat a tablespoon or two of bran each day.

QUESTION: The women that I work with and have coffee with are always talking about their weight. At five feet, five inches and 124 pounds, I don't think I am overweight but I really don't know. How can a person tell what their weight should be?

ANSWER: There is an easy rule of thumb to help find your ideal weight. For a woman, calculate 100 pounds for the first five feet in height and add five pounds for each additional inch. This will provide an approximate weight for a medium body frame. A small frame would be about 10 per cent less, while a large frame would be 10 per cent more.

METRIC GUIDE

A copy is available free of charge from Metric Commission Canada, Box 4000, Ottawa, Ont.

The publication has many hints on how to cope with metric. Many of the recipes it contains were tested in the food labs of the Food Advisory Division, Agriculture Canada.

Ingredients in recipes that we now measure by volume will be expressed in litres (l.) and millilitres (ml.) instead of cups and tablespoons.

Weights of ingredients will be in kilograms (kg.) and grams (g.) will replce pounds and ounces.

The centimetre (cm.) replaces the inch for measuring lengths. Pressure will be measured in kilopascals (kpa.) instead of pounds.

For a pleasant change, why not cook fish and shellfish on your outdoor barbecue!

If you have no outdoor grill, you can follow the same recipes on one of those smokeless electric barbecues right in your home.

Fish steaks, fillets, whole fish and some shellfish are suitable for grilling. Firm-fleshed fish such as halibut or salmon are more easily handled than thin fillets such as sole.

The 16-page booklet Seafood Treats from the Barbecue offers many imaginative recipes. Dishes include Fillets Kabobs, Captain's Haddock Fillets, Tangy Halibut Steaks, Shrimp and Fruit Skewers, Oyster Roast and Hickory-Smoked Salmon.

There are many more recipes you will want to try and which you and your family are bound to enjoy.

Zinc: An Essential Nutrient

Food for Thought

By JEAN MAYER and DR. JOHANNA DWYER

More and more nutritionists are recognizing the importance of trace minerals. These are essential nutrients, needed in only tiny amounts but whose functions are highly critical although not fully understood.

"A good example is zinc, a trace mineral that was identified as essential to humans in the early 1930s. Even today, we are only beginning to discover how vital zinc is.

Although there are only about two grams of zinc circulating through the body, and we need to eat only tiny amounts — about 15 milligrams a day for adults — but that small amount makes a big difference.

Zinc is an ingredient in some 20 different bodily enzymes, in addition to being in insulin, the hormone that controls carbohydrate metabolism. It is necessary to carry carbon dioxide in the blood and to eliminate it from the lungs.

It is also needed to metabolize alcohol and eliminate lactic acid from the body, which would otherwise accumulate in the blood during exercise. It also plays an important role in the digestion of protein and is essential in the fomation of nucleic acids, DNA and RNA, which carry and transmit genetic information between cells.

The signs of zinc deficiency are loss of appetite, failure to grow, infertility and reproduction problems.

We first became aware of the consequences of zinc deficiency in the early 1960s, when researchers in Iran and Egypt noted a combination of dwarfing, lack of sexual development, anemia, strange aberrations of appetite and enlarged spleen and liver in young Arab boys living at the poverty level.

More recently, zinc deficiency in a less severe form has appeared in the United States.

What surprised the researchers was that these children in the U.S. were all from middle-to upper-income families and most certainly were not eating on a poverty level. Their diet was what might be considered typically American: high in fats and refined sugars, with a lot of soft drinks and highly-processed foods — all of it low in zinc.

Recent surveys have shown that some of us, including children and young women, may not be getting enough zinc. This is particularly worrisome because zinc is not only important to growth; it is cricial during pregnancy.

Experimental studies show that zinc deficiency in early pregnancy results in miscarriage or premature birth and an increased incidence of birth defects.

Dr. Harold H. Sandstead, director of the Department of Agriculture's Trace Minerals Laboratory in Grand Forks, N.D., and an expert on the long-term effects of zinc deficiency during pregnancy, had found that a lack of zinc impairs learning ability in the offspring of experimental animals and impels a particularly peaceful strain of rats toward violence.

Further, he has found that an improved diet after birth did not alter these behavior patterns.

We do not know what all this means in human terms, but we do know that getting enough zinc is important.

Fortunately, there are many sources of the mineral. The richest source is oysters — a 12-ounce can of oysters contains a whopping 254 milligrams. Muscle and organ meats, dark meat of poultry, dairy products and eggs also provide ample amounts.

(Since the soil in many areas is deficient in zinc, animal feeds are now enriched with the mineral.)

Two ounces of liver contain about four milligrams of zinc; three ounces of chicken, 2.4; a cup of milk, one; an egg has about half a milligram.

The best way to get enough zinc is to eat a wide variety of fresh or lightly-processed foods each day. What's more, you'll soon discover that you'll enjoy your food more.

Dist. by Toronto Sun Syndicate

BIO-DEX READOUT:

0-5 Negative Cycle	Careless talk could lead to trouble. If you value your friends think hard before speaking your mind.
6-10 Neutral Cycle	Decision-making is difficult in this neutral phase. Remember that second thoughts can be a mistake, and indecision worse still.
11-15 Positive Cycle	Beware of over-confidence and over-indulgence. Your natural buoyancy could be interpreted wrongly by friends.

Everyone knows a car runs better on the highway than in the city. Going slow clogs the machinery and affects preformance. Your body has the same sort of problem. After a week of paperwork and television viewing your system needs to "clean out the carbon", so to speak. Getting out for a fast game of tennis or some swimming can get your body functioning much better. If your physical biorhythm is off, maybe a healthy workout will help.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law and I are separated by 3,000 miles. I never visit unless she invites me. She and my son have been married for 10 years and I'm invited for one week every year.

A half-hour after my arrival, my daughter-in-law goes into her bedroom and leaves me with her two children, 7 and 8. Two hours later my son comes home and informs me that his wife has a headache.

I prepare the evening meal and my son takes his wife hers on a tray. This goes on every day until I leave. She hardly says hello, and she never says goodbye. She doesn't even talk to her children. She acts as though they aren't there.

How can anyone be so hateful? She has a beautiful home, new car, money, clothes, jewelry — everything a woman could ask for.

This "sick" routine is a fake. If she doesn't want me to visit, why does she invite me? Her letters are so sweet. What is your opinion? — TEARS

DEAR TEARS: It's obvious that your daughter-in-law feels unable to handle any kind of communication with you, and she refuses to try. Before condemning her, ask your son what's going on. (She could be in therapy.) For you to have tolerated her disappearing act for 10 years without asking for an explanation seems strange. I can't blame you for shedding tears, but take comfort in the French philosophy: "To know all is to forgive all."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FEELING GUILTY": Don't feel guilty. No one said it better than Felix Frankfurter: "There's no highbrow in any lowbrow, but there's a fair amount of lowbrow in every highbrow."

HOME FIRE DEATHS A SHOCKING WASTE

By L.L. COLEMAN, M.D.

Does anybody really expect to fall asleep while smoking in bed? Of course not, yet such accidents do occur.

It is heartbreaking to read the story of three young children burned to death in a fire that was "not planned."

This is a shocking portrait of the unnecessary waste of lives in an era so filled with medical and surgical advances.

Children are safeguarded against the crippling devastation of polio or the aftermath of complications of measles, mumps, diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough, and German measles.

Adults are saved by heroic heart surgery and some cancers are cured by surgery and cobalt radio-therapy. It is shameful that these lives, sustained by the miracles of modern science, are later sacrificed to the ogre of carelessness and the total disregard for the death-dealing fire hazards that needlessly exist in our homes.

Families and communities spend vast amounts of money for hospitals, physicians and medications in order to restore the health of a single family member stricken by disease.

Yet rarely can these same families be induced to find, and remedy the fire risks that surround them and threaten their lives. Professional firefighters have devoted their educational campaigns to reduce the senseless waste of thousands of lives by preventable fires. They suggest:

1. Keep all matches in metal containers out of the reach of children. Fuel-burning lighters readily tempt children.

2. Get into the habit of breaking or tearing the match in half before throwing it away in order to be sure it is "out." Use safety matches and be sure to check them for "afterglow."

3. Rid the home of all inflammable (now called flammable) gasolines, kerosenes, and fuel oils unless kept in approved safety cans.

4. Do not smoke in bed.

5. Be sure that all electrical appliances and wiring meet the safety rules of the Underwriters Laboratory.

6. All public office buildings, hospitals, schools, and institutions have regular fire drills. Why not the home?

7. Without introducing element of fear, all children and adults can play an active role in finding and eliminating the obvious and hidden sources of potential fires.

8. A constructive family project should establish in advance exactly what each person is to do if a fire starts. This routine "fire drill" should be planned a few times a year to emphasize the changing responsibility of each member of the growing family.

9. Finally, many safe, simple fire-fighting devices and early smoke detection signals are available and should be installed in the home. A life is too valuable to be wasted by carelessness.

MOUNTAIN RED.
MOUNTAIN WHITE.
When you give grapes grown on the mountains plenty of sunshine, cool breezes and careful attention, you get distinctive mountain wines with a sunny flavour. Mountain Red and Mountain White are wines made to be shared with friends and good times. Packed in your picnic basket or with barbecued steaks, Mountain Red has a rich hearty taste. And the mellow flavour and subtle bouquet of Mountain White is at home with light meals or by itself. For the good times, open up a full litre of good tasting, good natured wines.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is an accepted fact that of the three departments of bridge — bidding, declarer's play and defensive play — defensive play is the most difficult to master. And so whenever I come across a deal in which excellent defensive play was required to defeat some given contract, it gives me great satisfaction. Today's deal is a case in point. It was played in the Masters Team-of-Four Championship of 1978.

North-South vulnerable.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
3 ♠	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

After winning the opening lead with his king of clubs, West led the deuce of spades. Declarer put up dummy's king and East won the trick with his ace as South followed suit with the five-spot.

It was rather obvious to East that West's deuce was a singleton, for if West had held the doubleton 6-2, he would have led the six. To trick three the high queen of spades was led and West had to make a discard.

I would imagine that the majority of the world's bridge players would simply discard the worthless four of clubs. If this discard had been made, East would have had a serious problem as to whether to next lead a spade or a club. But our actual West declarer, Ron Smith of St. Louis, discarded the ace of clubs.

The message conveyed by this discard was clear and unmistakable. It said: "Partner, don't lead a club. We're not going to make any more club tricks." East now signaled "Message received" by leading the jack of spades — and no matter what declarer played, he could not prevent West from making his king of trumps.

How West knew that South had no more clubs is unknown to me. But he did know, for sure, that if East led a spade, West's singleton king of trumps would take the setting trick. To conclude, if East had led a club to trick three, declarer would have trumped, after which his ace of trumps would have picked up West's king.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, November 10
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-Aril 19): Results of recent efforts surge to forefront. You are due for accolade. Cancer, Capricorn could figure prominently. Moon position highlights inventiveness, independence, initiative. You can build for future security. Judgment, intuition are likely to be on target.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You learn a secret — popularity zooms. People want to be with you. You receive more than the usual amount of social invitations. Key is to select, to choose quality, to adhere to recent resolutions. You get news from one who is in hospital.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Study Taurus message — stress romantic aspects, desires, wishes, an understanding of friend who needs encouragement. Aquarius is in picture. What seemed out-of-reach proves to be closer than anticipated.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on dealing with associates, the "boss," getting ideas on paper — and promises in writing. Gemini, Aries and Sagittarius person figure prominently. Be ready for information which leads to a change of direction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on opening lines of communication with family. Serious "adjustments" occur. Key is to keep eye on budget while making rational, intelligent, diplomatic concessions. One close to you talks of a "long journey."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on "mysterious happenings." Money, land and marriage could figure prominently. Be sure of legal terms, meanings. Your perceptiveness comes into play. Ask the right questions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Bring priorities into sharp focus — plan for what you want to achieve. Older individual is in picture. Accent on contract, cooperation, willingness to do more listening than asserting. Wait, observe, gather data.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be familiar with material at hand. You may be able to engineer a coup. What you do attracts wide attention. You'll gain allies. Associates, co-workers, relatives want to share experiences. your "audience" will be attentive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Creativity, significant changes, young persons, affair of heart — these are featured. Accept change and challenge. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. New start, fresh contacts and experiences dominate.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Establish position or policy. Dig in — protect assets. Obtain valid appraisals. Cancer individual plays key role. Yes, you are likely to receive written confirmation. You are capable now of presenting facts, figures in meaningful way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get chance to prove, check, verify — your ideas concerning close neighbors, relatives are apt to be on target. Accept invitation to party or social gathering. Change of routine would be beneficial.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You're on more solid financial footing than might be imagined. Aquarius, Aries persons figure in your personal scenario. You have opportunity to grasp complete picture of complicated situation. You could be "richer" as result!

IF NOVEMBER 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are passionate, intense, stubborn and creative. Leo, Aquarius persons play key roles in your life. July was perhaps the most memorable month for you thus far in 1978. You made a new, independent start this year. Many contacts will fully bear fruit in 1980. Tavel, social activity featured in November. Many of the questions will be answered in December. You are a fierce competitor, inventive and very sensitive to criticism.

REALTORS REALTORS

—Why are all realtors at Gardner Realty earning good money?
—Why do most of our realtors have exceptionally high earnings?
—Why are we continually in the top 2 of M.L.S. per capita sales?
—Because we are a select group of realtors committed to help one another to serve our clients well. We do not belong to a franchise, do not belong to a national referral system, do not have branch offices, do not run sales contests. We have room for more realtors who sincerely want success. 309 IN MEMORIAM

COX — In loving memory of Dick who passed away November 9, 1972.
November comes with deep regret,
A month that we shall never forget.
We hold our tears when we speak your name.
But the ache in our hearts remain the same.
No one can know the sorrow we share.
When the family meets and you're not there,
We miss you, Dick and always will.
—Always remembered and sadly missed by his wife, Leona, daughter Bobbie, son-in-law Jack and Grandchildren.

FUGLE — In memory of our beloved wife, mother, grandmother and daughter, Kathleen May (Kae) Fugle, who passed away November 9th, 1977.
We mourn for her in silence
No eyes can see us weep;
But many a silent tear is shed
While others are asleep.
—Always remembered, always loved by Bill and family and Mother.

In memory of our dear son Howard Stanley Minnie, passed away November 6, 1975.
More and more each day we miss him,
Friends may think the wound is healed.
But they little know what sorrow lies within our hearts concealed.
—Sadly missed by your loving parents, sister Marion and brother James.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUTE, SANDS

Tuber Artichokes Near Prime

GARDENING
jack beastall

The Jerusalem Artichoke, as it is called, has never been popular with local gardeners as a vegetable. Some gardening books mention it briefly; others omit it from the vegetable lists, probably because no special culture is involved.

Botanically the plant is Helianthus tuberosum, the tuberous rooted Sunflower.

The tubers are planted in late February to early March in boxes of soil, and transplanted to the garden after the last spring frost date for the area.

Outside of watering, no further culture is needed. The tall stems, often reaching eight to 10 feet in height, are strong enough to withstand wind. The majority of the leaves are still a rich green although some are now withering due to recent frosts.

The leaves are capable of supplying food to the tubers as long as they remain green. Like the potato, artichoke tubers increase in size and food value as the top growth dies down and for a few weeks thereafter.

As soon as all leaves have withered, the tall stems are cut off at soil level, chopped into one-foot lengths and criss-crossed over the planting to prevent deep penetration of frost into the soil during late fall and early winter.

Tubers are dug as needed from late November until the end of January, never more than one week's supply at a time. During February those tubers remaining in the soil begin to sprout and are no longer used for food.

The planting is then dug over and all tubers removed, the largest selected for replanting about six inches deep in boxes of screened compost which are stored in a cool frost-free place. Tubers left in the soil will grow and multiply, becoming a nuisance in the future.

A few years ago I discovered what I believe to be the reason for the disparaging remarks heard about tuberous artichokes. Our crop has been used and a friend gave us some that had been dug in November and stored in the basement like potatoes.

These tubers were soft and shrunken from loss of moisture, becoming hard when boiled, and no amount of boiling would soften them. Nor would the skins slip off as they should, and flavor was completely lacking.

Tuberous artichokes are always boiled in their skins and the skins slipped off while hot before serving or using in other recipes.

When the tubers are left in the soil and lifted as needed they cook in 10 to 15 minutes, are soft and have the distinct flavor common to this tuber. The week's supply will store well in the vegetable bin of the refrigerator.

The Jerusalem Artichoke is not a substitute for the potato, as some gardeners believe. They are not "floury," nor have they a potato flavor.

Their main features are the carbohydrates in a form easily digested, and the amount of Vitamin B contained, making them an excellent addition to meals over late fall and early winter.

There appear to be several varieties although varietal names are no longer mentioned.

We recently received some large purple-skinned tubers, freshly dug, which are superior in texture and flavor to the white-skinned we have been growing. Some will be kept for planting next year, and careful comparison made with the more common grown white. A source of supply is not known at present.

Outdoor Recreation Study Started by Bawlf

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf Tuesday initiated a special six-month study to determne the province's needs in outdoor recreation.

The study, to be headed by former deputy minister Lloyd Brooks, was commissioned to resolve pressures on B.C.'s recreational resources from both the large number of visitors and the growing resident demands, Bawlf said.

Emphasis will be placed on the need to get the best possible benefits from recreation facilities without overcrowding popular attractions or endangering environmental quality.

"The main objective of the study is to determine the nature and scale of demand on our recreational resources and to identify long-term planning needs to meet and guide the demand," the minister said.

The study should lead to better liaison among various government departments such as Fish and Wildlife, Parks and Land, Forest and Water Resources, Bawlf said.

Lightning Sets Off Fireworks; 5 Dead

MANAGUA (AP) — Lightning caused an explosion in a fireworks factory in the Nicaraguan capital killing at least five persons, fire officials said.

The explosion sent flames shooting 20 metres into the air from the Caimana factory and firemen said "very many persons" in and outside the building were burned.

Tourist 'Poverty' Row

LONDON (REUTER) — A row flared in Parliament early today over a report said to have been published in a Canadian newspaper describing how visitors to Britain can plead poverty and get a free holiday home.

MPs were discussing the case of an Asian family dumped outside the Foreign Office in London by an irate borough council, when a Conservative Opposition member referred to the report which he said had appeared in the Calgary Herald.

Hugh Rossi said a report in the newspaper gave readers advice on how to avail themselves of the so-called House the Homeless law to get free accommodation.

"You can buy a single ticket to Heathrow (airport outside London), preferably with a child in tow; you hire a taxi for $5 and ask to go to the local housing authority," Rossi read from what he said was the newspaper report.

The report added that the housing manager would "be obliged to house you" and that 350 Americans had taken advantage of the scheme this summer," he said.

Some Labor MPs shouted "You should have checked up" when Rossi said he did not know how much truth there was in the report.

Housing Minister Reg Freeson said: "You do neither yourself, your party nor housing policy in this country any good by that kind of smeer politics."

On Tuesday, the council at Hillingdon (in West London) put Kenyan Asian barber Jaffer Janmohammed and his four children into a taxi and told the driver to leave them at the Forign Office.

Hillingdon council complained that being near London airport it has to find homes for scores of poor immigrants who, it said, have been told by British diplomats abroad that town councils are legally required to house the homeless.

'HERITAGE OF GUILTY'

COLOGNE (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, speaking today on the 40th anniversary of the beginning of the Holocaust, said Germans bear the "heritage of the guilty" for Nazi atrocities against Jews.

"The Germans living today are mostly as individuals innocent," Schmidt said at a memorial service with Jewish leaders.

"But we have to bear the political heritage of the guilty and accept the consequences. Here lies our responsibility."

Chief Quits Smith Gov't

SALISBURY (AP) — The chief of Rhodesia's minority Matabele tribe quit the country's biracial transition government Wednesday and called for guerrilla leader and fellow tribesman Joshua Nkomo to return immediately.

Chief Kayisa Ndiweni resigned his $35,700-a-year job as a minister representing the most conservative black party in the transition government because of what he called insufficient Matabele representation.

"My people have demanded that I resign and call for the immediate return of Nkomo," Ndiweni said. "He is the national leader. I am the traditional leader of the Ndebele nation. We make up nearly half the country, but still we have no representation in this government."

Nkomo is co-leader with Robert Mugabe of the externally-based Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance that has been fighting to gain power for more than six years.

Official statistics show the Matabele number only about 800,000 compared with more than six million members of the majority Shona tribe. But the Matabele, who populate vast tracts of southwest and northwest Rhodesia, are regarded by many observers as the most cohesive force in Rhodesia's deeply divided black nationalist movements.

Ndiweni, 61, a former member of Prime Minister Ian Smith's white-minority government, also quit as deputy leader of the Zimbabwe United People's Organization, headed by the main Shona chief, Jeremiah Chirau. Zimbabwe is the African name for Rhodesia.

Chirau said Ndiweni's attitude was unfortunate but that he does not "believe that one man can either make or break a political party or a government."

Ndiweni, who remains a member of the white-dominated Rhodesian Senate, said he will return to his home in a tribal reservation and summon a Matabele chiefs meeting within two weeks.

Although the Matabele chiefs have denounced the guerrillas as terrorists, they called last June for the return of Nkomo. Smith also has tried to get Nkomo to join the administration on grounds the guerrilla chief controls an army and is more moderate than Mugabe. Mugabe heads a Shona-composed army based in Mozambique.

Meanwhile, black and white officials cabled appeals to British legislators not to renew trade embargoes imposed after November, 1965, when Smith unilateraly declared Rhodesia independent from Britain to head off black rule.

Smith has said the Dec. 31 target date for black rule cannot be met because of administrative delays in drawing up a constitution.

Uganda Pulls Back

DAR ES SALAAM (AP) — Uganda said it pulled back some of its troops from the Tanzanian war zone today but would send them back into battle if necessary.

Uganda Radio said a convoy of Ugandan marines, "which was on a mission of no return, has suddenly come back from the front line." But they are ready to return, it said, if Tanzania continues its "provocations."

Tanzania's official newspaper, The Daily News, earlier had branded as a "big lie" Ugandan President Idi Amin's offer to withdraw troops from Tanzania.

The paper said Amin made it "obviously clear that he was merely engaged in his usual sallies and eccentricities.

"Seasoned diplomats must have choked in diplomatic silence listening to the man who has blatantly violated our territorial integrity," the newspaper said.

"Let it be clearly understood that our territorial integrity is a matter over which we cannot entertain mediation or discussions let alone crude lies."

Women Priests Rejected

Washington Post

LONDON - Ordination of women to the Anglican priesthood was rejected by the Church of England Wednesday despite strong support for the move from bishops and laity in the church's General Synod.

The proposal to ordain women has been argued, both pro and con, as fiercely in Britain as it was in the United States two years ago, when the Episcopal Church decided to admit women to the pristhood.

In the British church's General Synod, which met in London, the House of Bishops voted 32 to 17 in favor: the laity were 120 to 106 in favor, but the clergy voted 149 to 94 against the proposal. Agreement of all three divisions of the synod is required for the change. The vote affects only the British church.

In the debate that preceded the vote, Archbishop Donald Coggan of Canterbury, primate of all England, argued in favor of the change. His wife signed a petition that called the admission of women to the preisthood "a matter of urgency."

When the results of the vote were announced, Dr. Una Kroll, a physician, feminist and internatinally known activist in church affairs, shouted from the gallery: "We asked you for bread and you gave us a stone."

In the synod debate, opposition argument centered around two points: that ordination of women was contrary to Scripture and church tradition, and that such a step would be a setback in unity talks with the roman Catholic Church.

Bishop Graham Leonard of Truro, who led the debate against ordaining women, argued that the bible speaks of God as "Father", that Jesus Christ was incarnate as a man and that he chose men to be his apostles.

Arguing for the change, school teacher Jean Mahland taunted opponents, charging that they feared female sexuality. "Priestess — that dreaded word is spoken and people draw back in horror with visions of sexual orgies and fertility cults," she said. Her remarks drew jeers.

There are an estimated 100 women in the Church of England who are in some stage of preparation for the priesthood.

TEST TUBE BABY CLINIC PLANNED

LONDON (AP) — Plans were announced Wednesday for the world's first test-tube baby clinic to be set up on the grounds of an 11th century castle at Bourn Hall near Cambridge, 80 kilometres northeast of London.

One major hurdle has yet to be cleared. The projected use of the site, and the buildings to be erected, require prior approval from local authorities.

The centre would be run by gynecologist Patrick Steptoe and Cambridge physiologist Robert Edwards, who pioneered the technique of implanting an egg into the womb that resulted in the July birth of the world's first known test tube baby.

Edwards, who helped Steptoe with the birth of baby Louise Brown at Oldham Hospital in northern England, told reporters: "If we get planning permission, it would be wonderful. Hundreds of women will want test tube babies. A lot of patients are infertile, and we will help them."

Edwards said the clinic also will be used to train doctors in the techniques he and Steptoe pioneered.

HAMMOND, Ind. (AP) — A former CIA watch officer admitted to federal authorities that he sold top-secret documents to the Soviet Union, an FBI agent testified Wednesday.

James Murphy said he interrogated William Kampiles, a 23-year-old Chicago man charged with six counts of espionage, shortly before he was arrested Aug. 17.

When Assistant U.S. Attorney James Richmond asked Murphy whether Kampiles realized that he had given away important U.S. defence information, Murphy said that Kampiles told him he knew it was a security breach.

Kampiles is accused of selling Soviet officials a technical manual on the KH-11 space satellite, which has been used for several years to monitor Soviet troop movements in military installations.

If convicted, he could rececive a maximum sentence of 70 years in prison on each count.

In earlier testimony Wednesday, Vivian Psachos, a researcher in the CIA's Soviet division, said Kampiles was asked by a Soviet agent in Greece to furnish information on missile sites, CIA agents abroad, and a "shopping list," of other available documents.

George Joannides, a CIA agent and former friend of Kampiles, testified Tuesday that Kampiles told him in the spring of 1977 that he wanted to work in the covert section of the CIA. Joannides said he told Kampiles he would need additional training.

Slow Growth Rate Seen

By JAMES ROWE Jr.
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Federal Reserve Board says U.S. economic growth could drop as low as 2.5 per cent next year as a result of White House efforts to fight inflation and save the dollar.

The prediction by G. William Miller is the lowest so far from a government official. Miller said the economy would grow between 2.5 and 3 per cent.

Many economists do not think a growth rate that low will create enough jobs to keep unemployment from rising. Many also think that if the government tries to keep the economy growing that slowly, the nation could slip into a recession.

However, Miller said in an interview, there is no reason to think that slower growth next year will cause the unemployment rate to rise above 6 per cent. The unemployment rate has hovered around 6 per cent all year and was 5.8 per cent in October.

He admitted that the Federal Reserve and the administration are walking a tight line in trying to fight inflation without causing a recession.

Since late April, the Federal Reserve has been raising interest rates to cut down on borrowing and reduce the rate of growth of the money supply. Last week, as part of a co-ordinated program to prop up the dollar, the central bank took further steps to raise interest rates sharply and further restrict the avilability of bank credit.

He said his revised growth estimate — earlier he and most administration officials had been talking about 3 per cent to 3.5 per cent next year — is the result of the heavy doses of monetary tightening the Fed already has applied as well as "any other follow-up that may be necessary."

Botha Eyes Press Muzzle

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Prime Minister Pieter Botha is threatening action against "radicals" in the South African press who exposed the government's $13.8 million propaganda scandal and forced the resignation of a cabinet member.

Botha's angry blast late Wednesday renewed fears that action would be taken to silence the newspapers that broke the story of how the now-defunct department of information spent $13.8 million to launch a pro-government newspaper.

Botha, who urged a crusading judge not to reveal evidence on the case and then fired him when he did not comply, said "radicals" in the South African press were trying to take over the white-ruled republic.

"My advice to them is to rather not try it," Botha said at a political rally at Sasolburg, 50 miles south of Johannesburg.

"I prefer a free press in South Africa, but as prime minister I cannot do what I would like to do," he said.

Justice Rudolf Erasmus, who heads the eighth government-appointed committee to investigate the scandal, began his probe Wednesday at the department's former offices in Pretoria with heavily armed police guarding the chambers.

Dr. Connie Mulder, who quit the cabinet Tuesday in the face of disclosures about illegal spending in the department of information that he headed, said he would remain in Parliament.

Judge Anton Mostert, appointed by the government to investigate violations of South Africa's tight currency regulations, last week shocked South Africans by revealing that the department of information had unlawfully used taxpayer money to found a pro-party English-language newspaper, The Citizen, and to form a black film industry.

After Botha fired Mostert, he named the four-man Erasmus committee to investigate the charges in secrecy. The committee chairman said anyone releasing information from his hearings would be liable to a $230 fine and six months in jail.

Council Committee Rapped For Helicopter 'Rudeness'

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce attacked city council's downtown economic development committee Wednesday for failing to endorse a proposal that would have seen a helicopter service established between the capital and Vancouver.

In a letter to Mayor Mike Young, chamber president R.J. Wheaton said the proposal by Okanagan Helicopters Ltd. was a worthy one that deserved the full support of council.

He added the chamber has no hesitation in endorsing the helicopter proposal.

Okanagan approached the committee last month, asking for an endorsation of its plan and urging the city to seek funding from the provincial government to help build terminal facilities.

At a meeting last week the committee decided to take no stand on the matter.

Wheaton said the chamber condemned the committee for its handling of the proposal.

He urged council to reconsider the Okanagan proposal.

Wheaton urged the city to aproach the provincial government for the specific funding available under the Airports' Assistance Program, which would provide the Victoria area with a proper heliport facility, available for the use of Okanagan, as well as other carriers.

Wheaton said before Okanagan can submit an application to the appropriate licensing authority it has to have the approval of both Victoria and Vancouver, as well as an acceptable heliport site at each end.

$5M Savings Plan

The education ministry and the B.C. Energy Commission have produced a 32-page magazine telling schools how to save $5 million annually by cutting energy costs.

Called Energy Conservation for Schools, the magazine is being sent to all public and independent schools and school district officials. It details how local school officials can reduce the energy consumption in individual schools.

A companion series of seminars on energy conservation will also be conducted.

"Most B.C. schools were built in an era when energy was cheap," says Education Minister Pat McGeer said.

'But that is no longer the case. Taxpayer dollars are now being consumed by energy waste at a far higher rate than we would like."

McGeer and Premier Bill Bennett in his role as energy minister produced a foreword to the booklet telling school officials that by tightening energy consumption, each school can cut energy costs by 20 per cent.

Much of the advice contained in the booklet is simple logic.

It recommends heating plants be checked and improved where practical and that heat be turned down at night.

The booklet tells how to assess the energy saving potential of a school and suggests the appointment of an energy conservation manager in each district.

There are detailed graphs showing how to keep records of saved energy.

It also recommends a public relations campaign so teachers and students understand the measures.

Tell All, Firm Urges City

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

The management consultant hired by Victoria to review operations in city hall's personnel department says he wants no part of a cover-up and has urged council to release the full details of his investigation.

In a letter to Mayor Mike Young and council, Gordon Newhouse, of G.H. Newhouse and Associates Ltd., states: "In the absence of all the facts not being made known, we suggest that the reputation of our firm has suffered irreparable harm. We are not prepared to continue to let this happen.

"We also wish it to be made known that our firm will not be party to or condone the covering up of any issues or actions either by council or by executive administration. In this regard, we believe that in the final analysis, our ultimate professional responsibility must be to the citizens of the city of Victoria . . . we respectfully request that council in the interests of responsible government, make known or confirm the full nature of our findings."

The letter also charges that Ald. Larry Ryan subjected the firm to falsehoods and possible slander at a recent council meeting.

Two weeks ago Ryan attacked Newhouse and Associates, saying the consultant had been responsible for the demolition of the personnel department.

Because of a report from Newhouse city council fired personnel director Terry FitzPatrick.

FitzPatrick, who at 60 had reached retirement age but had an option for five more years service, was dismissed after he refused to resign.

No reasons were ever given for the firing, but it was learned that shortly before his dismissal, FitzPatrick had been ordered by the mayor to stop allowing the company that publishes B.C.

South Africa, Angola Square Off On Border

Times News Services

UNITED NATIONS — In a military move that could undermine Western diplomatic efforts to avoid immedate confrontation with African countries at the Security Council, South Africa has begun a major build-up of troops in the northern part of Namibia, according to Western intelligence reports.

The South African move, which reportedly involves two new regiment-sized units, is being matched on the other side of the Angola-Namibia frontier by a general mobilization of Angola's army and militia and reinforcement of Cuban troops in that area, according to other diplomatic sources.

Angola, meanwhile, clamped a dusk-to-dawn curfew today on guerrilla territory along the strategic 1,000 mile Benguela railway that the Marxist regime promised to reopen within days.

A monitored Radio Luanda broadcast said the curfew was being enforced in Mocambedes, Benguela, Huambo and Bie — the four provinces that straddle the rail line between the Atlantic coast and the Zaire border.

Involved Western diplomats expressed sharp concern about the impact the mutual escalation could have on their continuing efforts here to negotiate a compromise resolution to replace African demands for global economic sanctions against Pretoria in the dispute over Namibia, a mandated territory ruled by South Africa since 1920.

Diplomatic sources said that troop increases could also be aimed at reinforcing the impression that the South Africans and their electoral allies in the territory, the Turnhalle Democratic Alliance, will continue to control the territory in the future.

Angola's ambassador to Belgium, Luis de Almeida, told a news conference in Brussels that Angolan President Agostinho Neto has mobilized a 200,000-strong militia force as well as the country's 31,000-man standing army because it fears that the build-up in the four provinces is a prelude to a South African attack into Angola to hit at SWAPO, a patriotic Namibian organization which is based in that country.

Negotiations at the United Nations continued Wednesday as the African countries — who have shown no enthusiasm for putting the United States and its allies in the difficult position of having to choose between joining or vetoing the sanctions — once again backed away from a showdown.

In a related development, three Canadian cabinet ministers confirmed Wednesday the RCMP has been investigating allegations that 155mm. shells were shipped from Canada to Spain and then on to Durban, South Africa, in defiance of United Nations sanctions.

SECOND JUDGE INVESTIGATED

A second B.C. judge is being investigated as to his relationship with a prostitute.

Justice Minister Otto Lang has asked the Judicial Council of Canada to investigate the activities of the federally-apointed judge, who sits in high court in B.C.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom Wednesday in Vancouver said only that the matter had been referred to the council following an initiative by Lang.

Other sources indicated, however, that the judge was involved with a prostitute working for an expensive call girl ring in downtown Vancouver.

Vancouver morality officers working to crack the ring apparently wanted to call the judge as a witness in court proceedings.

The case is the second in recent days involving a judge.

Gardom earlier revealed that the B.C. Judicial Council had been asked to conduct an inquiry into charges that a provincial court judge in Vancouver consorted with a known prostitute.

Premium Revenues Up Sharply For ICBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Insurance Corp. of British Columbia has reported net premiums for its automobile insurance act fund of $171,932,000 for the six months ended Aug. 31, compared with premiums of $145,414,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Total revenue was $194,999,000 compared with $165,690,000 in 1977.

President Robbie Sherrell said in a news release today that although the number of claims recorded is almost nine per cent higher than the corresponding period last year, the average dollar cost has stabilized.

"We have expectations that as a result of control programs, this levelling-off will be maintained for the balance of the year," he said.

Bodily injury claims averaged $4,750 during the period under review, $940 or 16.5 per cent less than the $5,690 average in 1977.

Sherrell said that although the figures are encouraging, it was still too early to made a definite prediction on rates next year.

RATE JUMP

LONDON (CP) — Britain's bank rate was pushed up by a huge 2.5 percentage points today in what appeared to be a government warning of economic restraint if unions defy wage guidelines.

The Bank of England announced that the rate has been increased to 12.5 per cent from 10.

CBC Union Grievance On Nash Appointment

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Union of Public Employees has filed a grievance with CBC television in an attempt to have Knowlton Nash removed from his position as anchorman of the network's 11 p.m. newscast, a union spokesman said Wednesday.

Barrie Davis, chief negotiator for the broadcast division of the union, said the grievance, filed Nov. 2, is based on CBC's failure to audition and assign the position to a staff announcer.

Davis said the appointment of Nash is a violation of the collective agreement because management has rewritten the role of a newscaster, whose duties under the agreement consist only of reading the news.

"Newscasters have never done journalistic work, but Nash will be. He created a job for himself and the management took the jurisdiction to label Nash chief correspondent, when there is no such animal in our collective agreement."

Dennis O'Neill, executive assistant to the managing director of CBC television programming, said that although as many as 100 staff members were interested in the job, "management considered Nash as good or better than any others on staff."

The position as anchorman for week-night newscasts came open when Peter Kent was appointed CBC's Africa correspondent.

Snag Could Halt Peace Talks: Sadat

Times News Services

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat says peace talks with Israel may be suspended and the Jewish state today acknowledged negotiations have run into difficulties that could cut short Prime Minister Menachem Begin's trip to Canada and bring him home.

Israeli Foreign Ministry officials said they did not know the nature of the problems but cited news reports from Washington. The reports said the talks have bogged down over the issue of linking the treaty to the future of other occupied Arab territories.

Reports from Montreal that Begin may cut short a six-day official trip to Canada could not be confirmed.
special cabinet session, the

Sadat spoke of a possible suspension in the negotiations Wednesday in an interview with the Kuwaiti newspaper Al Siyassah. "There is a possibility of a break in the negotiations. But I am confident that if this happens the Israelis will come back within one month to resume the dialogue."

Sadat also said Carter supports his demand for a withdrawal from the Golan Heights — a remark observers said was sure to anger the Israelis.

Israeli reports said Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Defence Minister Ezer Weizman may return home from Washington again for a special cabinet session to be called by Begin next week.

The officials said it appears from news reports that the Egyptians want to reopen some points agreed on during the earlier stages of the negotiations.

Israeli construction of a 1,500-apartment complex on the West Bank were linked in some reports to Sadat's statement. Sadat also accused oil-rich Arab states of pettiness and defeatist attitudes for failing to endorse his peacemaking efforts with Israel.

In Montreal Wednesday night, Begin had urged sympathizers to be patient in the quest for a peace treaty with Egypt and to give generously to bolster his country's economic future.

A Life Saving Nuisance

WINFIELD (CP) — Dwain Johanson's dog is named Nuisance but its barking that woke the household early Wednesday was an annoyance that saved the lives of two young canoeists.

Nuisance, a German Shepard guard dog, was barking because it heard two young men in the middle of Kalamalka Lake calling for help after their canoe capsized.

Richard Russell, 18, and Dean Holman, 17, both of Winfield, were pulled from the freezing and choppy waters of the lake in the Okanagan Valley by Johanson, 46, who was awakended by his dog, heard cries for help and reached the men in his small boat at about 3:30 a.m. PST.

"After five or 10 minutes, I finally located the boys hanging on to the overturned canoe," he said. "They looked like they had just about had the biscuit.

"What they were doing out there at that time of night in those waters I can't imagine," said Johanson.

The men were treated at hospital and released.

Banky-Panky Probe

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government is investigating the possibility that the country's chartered banks have been instrumental in the recent decline of the dollar by speculating against Canadian currency, Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced Wednesday.

Chretien quickly added, however, there are no grounds at this time for such accusations.

The minister was replying in the Commons to questions from Social Credit MP Eudore Allard (Rimouski).

Chretien later told reporters he chose the date for next week,s budget against the advice of at least one provincial premier who had asked for a delay of two weeks.

He did not name the premier.

Chretien said he refused the postponement because he had already committed himself to a mid-November budget and saw little point in awaiting the outcome of a first ministers' meeting later in the month.

Perhaps in anticipation of budget contents, the U.S. dollar in terms of Canadian funds at noon today was down 6-25 at $1.1723 in Montreal trading.

The U.S. dollar came under heavy selling pressure in Tokyo today and started with losses in Europe, stalling for a second straight day President Carter's currency rescue hopes.

Royal Trust Plans Quebec Escape

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Trust Co., Canada's largest trust company, is putting the final touches on moving its head office to Ottawa from Montreal by reorganizing its shares into an Ottawa-based holding company called Royal Trustco Ltd.

Royal Trust's 7,800 shareholders received a letter this week informing them they have until Dec. 1 to exchange their stock for shares in the new company.

The move is the final step in a three-year operation by Royal Trust to become a federally-chartered corporation.

Shareholders will have no power to approve or disapprove the head-office relocation, because the company is changing name, thus avoiding an emotion-charged debate such as the one precipitated by the head office move by Sun Life to Toronto.

But they can choose whether to exchange their stock in the Quebec-based operating company for stock in the Ottawa holding company.

In the letter explaining the reorganization, Royal Trust says it wants to free itself from the straitjacket of provincial legislation governing the growth, money-raising and operations of a trust company.

It wants corporate freedom to diversify through acquisitions outside the trust business — something that Quebec regulatory bodies now deny a trust company.

"It gives us more flexibility for that," Richard La Prairie, Royal Trust's executive vice-president and chief financial officer, said.

Royal Trust administers assets worth $19.2 billion, its latest audited report shows. Quebec accounts for 24 per cent of its gross income, which was $595 million last year.

Under the share exchange proposal, shareholders will receive four shares of Royal Trustco stock for each three Royal Trust Co. shares they submit.

Two other trust companies — Canada Trust Co. and Canada Permanent Trust Co, — become corporations to escape provincial restrictions on their operations.
